Choking Catarrh.

Have you awakened from a disturbed sleep with all the horrible sensations of an assassin clutching your throat and pressing the life-breath from your tightened chest? Have you noticed the languor and debility that succeed the effort to clear your throat and head of this catarrhal matter? What a depressing influence it exerts upon the mind clouding the memory and filling the head with pains and strange noises How difficult it is to rid the nasal passages throat and lungs of this poisonous mucus all can testify who are afflicted with catarrh. How difficult to protect the system against its further progress towards the lungs liver and kidneys all physicians will admit It is a terrible disease and cries out for relief and cure.

The remarkable curative powers when all other remedies utterly fail of SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE, are attested by thousands who gratefully recommend it to fellow-sufferers. No statement is made regarding it that cannot be substantiated by the most respectable and reliable references.

Each packet contains one bottle of the Radical Cure, one box Catarrhal Solvent, and an Improved Inhaler with treatise and directions and is sold by all druggists for $1 00

WILL YOU LISTEN TO SOUND ADVICE?

Owing to the inclination of many people to be humbugged in the purchase of articles of necessity in the household we feel it our duty to sound a note of warning to those who seek remedies for the relief of the aches and pains incident to this season of the year The great and growing popularity of BENSON'S PLASTER has tempted unscrupulous manufacturers to offer many worthless substitutions and imitations of that valuable remedy hence we would advise those who wish to secure prompt relief from Coughs Colds Hoarseness Pleurisy, Chest Pains Sciatica Rheumatism Lumbago and Backache, to carefully avoid worthless plasters by always asking for BENSON'S and let no persuasion by the dealer induce you to accept any other plaster

The Repairs to the Mullan Tunnel Progressing.

A SHOOTING SCRAPE IN MONTANA

Hotly Contested Ten Round Fight at Helena—The Usual Chapter of Crimes and Accidents From California Coast Notes

HELENA, May 6— We came right past where the men are at work,' said Gen Warren, just from the Mullan tunnel 'The men who are working there now are too cautious They have got the 1000 feet of track which the fire twisted out of shape in the snowshed all relaid again, but they are backward about going into the tunnel fearing bad air There is no circulation you see for the reason that the east end was sodded up for the purpose of preventing that while the fire was in progress The fire cannot have extended in very far though for at about sixty or eighty feet from the tunnel's mouth you come to solid rock and then for about 200 feet there isn't a stick of timber The railroad company has permitted the public to get a much worse idea of the situation than is warranted by the facts The belief over there is that trains will be running through the tunnel as usual in about ten days "

THROWN FROM A BUGGY

Two Men Very Seriously Injured—One Will Probably Die.

SAN FRANCISCO May 6 —An accident occurred this evening at Kearney and Market streets, which resulted in the probable fatal injury of a well known citizen and the serious injury of another Bernard Horn of the firm of Horn & Chapman wholesale meat dealers, and Joseph Ellis

The collector of the firm drove a young horse to the Bay District track this morning for the purpose of exercising the animal a very spirited and fast colt On their return they drove very rapidly and when at the corner of the streets mentioned the buggy struck the Lotta fountain, throwing both men violently to the ground Ellis was found to have received two lacerated scalp wounds one over the right eye and the other over the right ear

The injuries to Horn were much more serious His face and head were covered with blood A long deep cut, broad enough to lay one's hand in extended from the right temple to the base of the skull It was over six inches long This blow had fractured the skull Further examination showed that Horn's collar bond was also fractured and as his nose was broken and both eyes badly blackened his face presented a sickening sight. It is believed that it is impossible for Horn to recover

TALE OF THE SEA.

A Pitiful Account of Suffering While Rounding Cape Horn

SAN FRANCISCO May 6 —The crew of the schooner Edward E Webster which arrived Friday from Gloucester Mass give a pitiful tale of hardships The schooner left Montevedeo 116 days ago, and while hovering around Cape Horn for six weeks the meat became spoiled and had to be thrown overboard About the first of April several of the crew began to lose the use of their legs and could not work on deck On the fifteenth a seaman named Edward Fitzgerald was taken sick, and on the twenty-eighth died Long before his death everything in the shape of provisions had given out except flour and to make matters worse this last turned musty Meanwhile the crew were attacked by a new complaint which is said here to be sciatic rheumatism When only a few days from San Francisco they spoke an English boat who gave them potatoes and other vegetables which were eagerly welcomed by the nearly famished and almost helpless crew She put in here for repairs and to get a supply of provisions and it is expected that she will leave for Cape Flattery Tuesday

FISTIC MATTERS.

A Hotly Contested Ten-round Match Fought—Bates to Meet Hawkins.

HELENA Mont May 5—Dong Tonsley of Des Moines, Iowa, and Frank Rose of Rawlins Wyoming, fought ten rounds with small gloves to-day at the Pleasure Garden for a $100 stake and a $250 purse Rose was in fine condition but Tonsley had too much flesh The fight was hotly contested and both were very bloody at the finish Tonsley went down frequently to avoid punishment Rose had decidedly the best of the fight and the referee, Harry Walridge decided in his favor Billy Hawkins and Jimmy Kelly were behind Tonsley and Billy Sayers and Jack Bernard seconded Rose At least $1000 changed hands

Jimmy Bates the Montana light weight, who was knocked out by Cleary in San Francisco lately has been matched against Billy Hawkins, ex-champion light weight of Canada to fight for a $500 purse and $500 a side between Helena and Butte The date is not agreed upon yet

TERRIBLE SHOOTING SCRAPE.

Two Men Probably Fatally Wounded—Trouble Over Fencing Land

HELENA M T May 6 —A report has reached here of a terrible shooting scrape on Willow creek about seven miles south of this place, in which S T Milroy and brother were dangerously if not fatally shot by Pat Dooley, his son Johnny, James Campbell and Blair King The cause is said to have been a dispute about fencing land The report says Dooley and party approached the Milroys, who were fencing some land and ordered them off the ground, and upon their refusing to comply, commenced firing upon them with rifles The first shot took effect, mortally wounding S T Milroy, and dangerously, if not mortally wounding his brother The shooting seems to have been premeditated Considerable feeling exists against the criminals Pat Dooley has been arrested, and is now in jail at Philipburg The others are still at large

THE BRAKES APPLIED

Jay Gould and His Associates Estopped in Their Favorite Game

NEW YORK May 5 —The Times this morning says that Jay Gould and other officers of the Missouri Pacific and Missouri Kansas & Texas Railway Companies were served yesterday with an order to show cause why they should not be made to halt in their endeavors to get absolute control of the International & Great Northern railway and sever it from its owner, the Missouri, Kansas & Texas

An order was obtained from Judge Barrett by counsel for Wm Landon Ball and Wm Martinson representing a majority of the stockholders, who purpose to oust the Gould board at the annual election on May 16

Judge Barrett also granted a temporary injunction restraining Gould and his associates from in any way monkeying with the stock or securities of the Missouri Kansas & Texas or the International & Great Northern or in any way changing the status of either company until after the annual election and they are all ordered to show cause in addition why acts in relation thereto that they have recently done should not be declared void

It was only last Tuesday or Wednesday that Messrs. Ball and Martinson learned that Gould and his associates had by clever manipulation secured the control of about all the stock and bonds of the International & Great Northern without the payment of a cent in money and that the directors of the M K & T had hurriedly agreed to cancel the lease of the International to their road They at once took measures to frustrate the scheme with the result mentioned

THE BEEM TRAGEDY

Statements Made by Mrs Beem Concerning the Fatal Shooting

CHICAGO May 6 —The Times will print a statement to the effect that the Veteran Union League of Chicago of which the late Gen Martin Beem was a member will probably hold a meeting to discuss measures for investigating the mystery of his supposed suicide in Nebraska

Mrs Beem arrived here to-day from Alton where she attended the burial of the dead soldier A new feature of the case is her statement that the General attempted to murder her before he shot himself This does not correspond with previous versions of the tragedy received in Chicago and supposed to have been learned originally from Mrs. Beem

They were in effect that the two shots were both directed by the general against himself Mrs Beem's statement here is she was awakened by feeling the pistol in the hands of the general being pressed against her and the discharge was deflected by her throwing up her arm the ball cutting a hole in her dress at the shoulder Gen Beem she says, immediately turned the weapon upon himself, and died almost instantly

MEETING OF METHODISTS

Bishop Fowler's Views Regarding the Vicarious Atonement

NEW YORK, May 6 —All the galleries and the mammoth lower floor of the Metropolitan Opera house were crowded this afternoon at a mass meeting of the Methodists given under the auspices of the New York City Church Extension and Missionary Society.

A sermon was preached by Bishop Charles H Fowler, D D LL D, of San Francisco He spoke on the death of Jesus Christ to save mankind and he said it was the coarsest and most brutal cruelty to punish the innocent for the guilty But Christ died to save the world 'Sin,' he continued is not punishable on its own account not because of its demerit, and there is nothing in justice making it necessary to punish sin because it is sin but it is punished because of the demands of the innocent Sin has no right not even the right to be punished Righteousness commands justice The law must have the sanction of penalty otherwise it will be only advice

In conclusion Bishop Fowler said that Christ was exempt from the penalty in dying to save the world Groups of clergymen about the opera house discussed with great interest these views of the bishop after the close of the meeting

GENERAL NEWS.

Grover Making Desperate Efforts to Capture Oregon in June.

INGALLS-VOORHEES CONTROVERSY.

General Review of the Weather All Over the Country—Senator Voorhees to be Banqueted —Immigration to Washington Territory.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—That the president is exceedingly anxious to carry Oregon in the June election is well known, and that he is interfering in the politics of that state is also thoroughly understood. The latest phase of Cleveland's effort to carry Oregon was described in the New York Tribune this morning. The following is the article:

Smith M. Weed, the so-called "wizard of Plattsburg," who was Samuel J. Tilden's confidential agent in the negotiation of 1876, by which the sage of Gramercy park and Graystone sought to purchase his election, and who is known as one of the shrewdest political agents in the country, has gone to California. He had not expected to make this trip up to within forty-eight hours of the time when he started, for he had invited some friends to spend Sunday with him at his home in Plattsburg. Since Weed's departure for the Pacific coast it has come out that the administration is making desperate efforts to carry Oregon, in order to secure the control of the United States senate, and the hint is thrown out that this is the object of Weed's visit to the coast.

The election of members of the legislature will take place in Oregon on the eve of the assembling of the national conventions and the administration is said to have conceived the idea of carrying Oregon to make the St. Louis gathering enthusiastic, and depress that of Chicago. Among the methods of the democrats to carry the state is the promotion of the prohibition movement. There is a full congressional and legislative prohibition ticket in the field. St. John of Kansas has been sent out there and is making strong effort to get a large prohibition vote, in order to defeat the republicans, against whom he has been rancorous ever since the exposure of his proceedings in 1884. The democrats hold the state administration in Oregon, and are making every effort from state and national officers to carry the day. The republicans of the state are alive to the situation, however, and do not propose to let it go democratic.

CROP BULLETIN.

General Review of the Weather All Over the Country.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—The weather crop bulletin says: General rains have occurred during the week Oregon, Washington territory and California, reducing season's deficiency, and probably improving the prospect for growing crops. The rainfall for the season has been less than in the central valleys and generally throughout the cotton region.

In the wheat region of the Ohio valley and in the tobacco regions of Virginia, North Carolina and Kentucky, about from eighty to ninety per cent. of the usual amount of rainfall has occurred.

Slight excesses of rainfall for the season are reported from the southern portions of the gulf states, Nebraska, Dakota and Southern Iowa, and in the interior of New England and the middle Atlantic states; and large crops are reported from Minnesota, Northern Iowa, Texas and Western Kansas.

In Oregon and Washington territory and extreme portions of California, from two-thirds to three-fourths of the usual amount of rain has occurred during the present season.

During the past week, the weather has been unfavorable for growing crops in Minnessota, Dakota and Nebraska, where seeding has been temporarily suspended, owing to cold and heavy rains.

In Illinois, Missouri, Kansas and Louisiana the weather has been generally favorable, and growing crops have probably received during the week.

INGALLS-VOORHEES CONTROVERSY.

The Former Declines to let the Newspapers Have His Speech for the Present.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—Senator Ingalls's speech in the Voorhees controversy has not yet appeared in the Record. Several newspaper men who have applied to the senator for a copy of his speech have been denied it, upon the ground that he is holding it for revision. It is whispered that there will probably be some step taken toward eliminating from the record the violent personalities employed in that controversy. Whatever is being done is, however, being kept very quiet.

The "Tall Sycamore."

WASHINGTON, May 6.—Senator Voorhees will be given a reception by members of the Indiana democratic club in this city on the night of the 17th inst. On that occasion Senator Voorhees will review the charges made against him by Mr. Ingalls, that he was not in sympathy with the Union during the war. He claims that he will show by documentary evidence in part that the charges are untrue.

THE FLOOD OF IMMIGRATION.

Arrival of 200 Foreigners Bound for Washington Territory.

NEW YORK, May 5.—Immigrants in Castle Garden are as thick as bees in a hive. Yesterday 5360 immigrants arrived on eight steamships from Germany, England and Italy. Arrivals this week are nearly 20,000. Of these 5360 people fully 4000 stated that it was their intention to find homes in the West. Nearly 200 were in care of an agent of a colonization company, who is engaged to take them to Washington territory. The extended advertising that Washington territory has done is bearing rich fruits, as shown.

THE FIGHT WAXING HOT.

Two Noted Virginians Involved—Riddleberger's Denunciatory Telegram.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—The fight between Riddleberger and Mahone relative to Virginia politics is getting very hot. Riddleberger has issued a circular denouncing the action of Mahone in removing the chairman of the republican committee in Riddleberger's county through a midnight order, saying. "I shall ask the people of Shenandoah to hear me on the issue of the canvass. It will then be daylight. Only cowards and assassins make publications at midnight."

ROLAND REED.

He tells a good story to a Tribune reporter and gives him a short autobiography.

N. Y. Tribune, March 10: Roland Reed is naturally very much elated over his success during the last two weeks at the Fourteenth-street theater in David D. Lloyd's clever comedy, "The Woman Hater." Mr. Reed was seen the other evening by a reporter while the actor was making up for his part of Bandy,—a proceeding which takes him very little time, as his strongly marked features require little "lining" to give them the appearance of middle age. A little rouge placed very high on the cheek bones, and the use of a dark flesh tint are about all that he needs. "I cannot express," said Mr. Reed, "how great is my gratification at the reception that has been given me and my play. For years I have had the ambition and the desire to get away from the medley drama, but I had to feel my way cautiously. My first start as a star showed which way my inclination lay. I purchased the rights of 'The Arabian Nights' from Mr Daly, and started out to play it in the West. It was too neat. I went out with two trunks and came home with a paper bundle. There was no mistake which way the popular taste was tending, especially in the small cities and the West. I was not strong enough to fight against the tide, so I decided that at first I would swim with it. I secured 'Check' from Marsden, and followed that with 'Humbug.' But I was always desiring to get into something more legitimate, and after Raymond's death I was told about 'The Woman Hater,' and got it to read. Well, the first time I read it I did'nt think much of it; the second time I liked it a shade better, and when I had read it five or six times I was in raptures about it. This is entirely different from one's general experience with a comedy, which seems funny the first time you hear it, and less so on each succeeding occasion. 'Did you ever hear the story on this point about the manager and the dramatist? No? Well, it runs this way: A dramatist read a comedy to a manager, who was delighted with it and requested the dramatist to leave it so that he, the manager, could go over it again. When the dramatist called the next morning the following dialogue ensued:

"Dramatist—Well, how did you like the play?

"Manager—H'm. I don't think it bears repetition. It didn't sound half as funny the second time.

"Dramatist—Were you insane enough to expect it? I shall have to tell you a parable in the form of a story. There was once a man who was being tried for his life, and his counsel came to his cell and read him the speech he was going to make to the jury. 'Splendid,' cried the prisoner; 'no jury will ever convict me after hearing that. But I wish you would leave it with me over night I may be able to suggest a point or two more.' When the lawyer came the next morning he found his client depressed. 'Look here,' said the unfortunate man, 'I don't think this is very strong.' 'But,' exclaimed the astonished lawyer, 'last night you thought it was splendid.' 'I know,' answered the client, 'but then I'd only heard it once.' Then the lawyer arose in his wrath and said: 'You blanked idiot, the jury will only hear it once.'

"I was naturally very anxious, continued Mr Reed, "about my reception in this part in New York, the first place where the play has had a real test. There is little doubt that it could be played remuneratively in this theater for the next three months. I have tried to buy the time of some of the following stars, but was unsuccessful, so I must go on the road again; but next season I shall come to this theater in November for a long run. There have been reports published about my intending to try other plays, but there is no truth in them. 'The Woman Hater' is good enough for me for several years to come. In some of the smaller towns and the one night stands I may have to play "Check" and 'Humbug' this year, for they demand coarser dramatic fare. I play out as far as San Francisco, and my season will extend into June."

"How long have you been on the stage, Mr. Reed?"

"Ever since I was a baby and was carried on. My father, who is 82 years old, is the oldest man connected with the profession in this country. He was for over fifty years in the Walnut-street theater, Philadelphia."

A COMPETING POEM.

Prize Ode Entered for the St. Louis Contest in June.

PORTLAND, Or., May 4, 1888.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

I saw by dispatches that it was the intention of the Cleveland Democratic Club of New York to offer fifty dollars (50.00) for the best original campaign poem. Anxious to compete, ignorant of the address to which it should be forwarded, I offer it to you for publication, hoping that it may attract their attention.

J. ALEX. CARLYLE,
411 Eighth St., Portland.

N. B. Thought it a delicate compliment to the president to interlard my verse with some of his well-known, brainy expressions.

J. A. C.

My second term buncombe—O, let that repose
In "innocuous desuetude" under the rose.
With "a zeal born of benefits" I'll strive to retain
The "patronage of office" I struggled to gain.
Why did I prate of "the allurements of power"
And "rotation in office?"—Vulgar slogan o' war.
That shaft hit the mark; when too late I could see
That a boom for me then would a boomerang be.

Forget ye the blunder, repented so soon;
Snow it deep under at St. Louis in June.

Civil Service Reform! the republican belle—
A mistress I loved, not wisely nor well;
"Hope of favor to come" lured me to her toils,
Unheeding the cry—"To the victors the spoils!"
But the starry-eyed goddess betrayed me to scorn,
Another scan. mag.—the mugwump—was born.
I thought to disown him. Why explain? Verbum sap.

He cannot be weaned from the government pap.
Cover with pledges this blundering buffoon;
Snow him deep under at St. Louis in June.

Memorial day! 'Twas by "offensive partisans" set,
To cherish a cause they should nobly forget;
No North and no South—under one flag we weep—
As the Blue and the Gray 'neath its folds sweetly sleep.
O, that battle-worn flag, powder-burnt and blood-bought,
Recalling the scenes where my substitute fought.
Vain hoped-for atonement, if a comrade say low:
"Boys, his was the order; give it back to the foe."

Forget the rash order, rescinded so soon;
'Twill not count as a blunder at St. Louis in June.

As "the war was a failure," I vetoed with pride
The bills for the pension of men on that side.
But the howl which went up from the veterans o' war
Taught me that "retrenchment" might be carried too far.
Not a thought which I uttered, not a word which I wrote,
But in some part of the country has lost me a vote.
My message on tariff killed sheep-raisers en masse,
Slain, like the victims of Samson, with the jaw of an ass.

Forget ye these blunders, repented so soon;
Snow them all under at St. Louis in June.

SPECIAL POLICEMEN.

"Business Man" Sets Forth Some Plain, Sensible Views on This Subject.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

I have seen so much of late in regard to special policemen that I would like to have a chance to say a few words on the subject. From resolutions adopted by the democratic convention and from articles appearing in so-called newspapers, one would be led to suppose that the special policemen were responsible for all the wrong doing in the city; that they alone are to blame that gambling houses are maintained, and because the social evil is not abolished and all that sort of thing.

Now I, in common with a number of other business men, employ one of these specials and pay him his wages. We look upon him as our private watchman, and at our request the city allows him $1 per month and the privilege of wearing a star, so that he can make arrests if necessary. Should the city take this privilege away from him we should still employ him and pay him. If there is any gambling house or other improper places on his beat, it seems to me that it is the regular policeman on the beat, who is employed and paid by the city, who should be held responsible, but we never hear any complaint against him. It is always the special whom we employ and pay to guard our stores, and who has no authority over the regular policeman who has charge of the beat, that is blamed for everything. Not long since THE OREGONIAN published interviews with nearly all the principal business men of the city on this subject, which satisfied all honest, fair-minded persons in regard to it. But a few irresponsible persons, influenced by selfish and unworthy motives, still keep up a howl about abolishing the special police system, which is sheer nonsense, as those who employ specials want them, and will have them and will pay them, and if the public want gambling houses or any other improper places closed, let the regular police who are paid by the public attend to the matter.

BUSINESS MAN.

The Correct Time.

There are very few men who do not pride themselves on always having the correct time; and wonderful and delicate mechanisms are devised to enable them to do so. But the more delicate a chronometer is made, the more subject it becomes to derangement, and unless it be kept always perfectly clean, it soon loses its usefulness. What wonder, then, that the human machine—so much more delicate and intricate than any work of Man—should require to be kept thoroughly cleansed. The liver is the main-spring of this complex structure, and on the impurities left in the blood by a disordered liver, depend most of the ills that flesh is heir to. Even consumption (which is lung-scrofula), is traceable to the imperfect action of this organ. Kidney disease, skin diseases, sick headache, heart disease, dropsy, and a long catalogue of grave maladies have their origin in a torpid, or sluggish liver. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, by establishing a healthy, normal action of the liver, acts as a sure and preventive of these diseases.

Greek Paupers.

NEW YORK, May 6.—The steamship Rhaetia, which has just arrived here, had on board sixty-six Greek passengers, who were detained at Castle Garden on the charge of being paupers.

The Oldest Mason Dead.

MEXICO, Mo., May 6.—Alfred Burns died to-day at the age of 98 years. He has been a Mason for seventy-five years, and is said to have been the oldest member of the order in the world.

A CABLE LETTER FROM BERLIN.

More About the Pope's Edict—The Terms on Which the Sultan of Morocco will Arbitrate —Old World Notes.

[Copyrighted by the Associated Press.]

BERLIN, May 5.—The emperor's sleep was unbroken for several hours toward morning. It was the best sleep he has enjoyed for many weeks, and he awoke from it with a good appetite and in good spirits. He cannot walk a step, though he was able to stand occasionally. The danger is that in every recurrence of the crisis, with his powers of resistance reduced to a minimum, there will be no chance for him to survive long.

The crown prince, though absorbed in extensive duty, confers daily with the empress, apart from his visit to his father. This marked change in the crown prince's demeanor was coincident with the visit of Queen Victoria, whose success in counciling him proves to be more enduring than was anticipated.

The return of Prince Bismarck's rheumatism has shown the advisability of an early resort to Ems, but the condition of the emperor still forbids his leaving his post.

PAN-SLAVISM IN RUSSIA.

The resurrection of the Pan Slavist party in Russia has reawakened alarm in official circles. The czar's reinstatement of Gen. Bogdanovitch in his former position in the Russian service is not an isolated proof that open adoption of an offensive policy approaches. The Cologne Gazette suggests that Pan-Slavism has grown mightier than the czar himself and may force his hand and cause him to enter into a fighting alliance with France. The Official Gazette of Berlin interprets the position in a similar way. It is believed that the war party has convinced the czar that the next French elections will return a war ministry and that Russia ought to be ready to co-operate with France.

The sensation of the week has been the failure of the manufacturer, Heinrich Huffer, whose works were at Crimmitzschau. The event attracts attention beyond its intrinsic importance, as a result of the tariff measures of Russia.

AFFAIRS IN AUSTRIA.

The unter haus of reichsrath has been the arena of some of the liveliest encounters ever known in the Austrian parliament. For three days groups forming a majority have been engaged in a fierce attack upon Dr. Gautsch, minister of public instruction, apropos of his education budget. For once the members, old and young, of the Tcheque group found common cause with the German group, it is thought from utterly opposite reasons. The Germans charged Dr. Gautsch with organizing Slaviation in Austria.

The Bohemian deputy Herr Knepek, in the course of a violent oration against the clerical and anti-German tendencies embodied in the proposals of Prince Lichstein, as approved by the government, declared that their adoption would lead to the rising of the German people of Bohemia.

BERLIN NOTES.

The socialist fund for the aid of the family of Her Hazenclevo, member of the reichstag, who became insane last winter, exceeds 14,000 marks.

The shoemakers' strike in Berlin is extending. There are now 5200 workmen out. The employers are weakening, and a number of them are ready to accede to the demands of their men for an increase of wages.

Henry Villard has gone for a sojourn at Wiesbaden.

Carl Schurz is making arrangements for a banquet at the Kaiser hotel, at which will assemble the leading men in politics, science and literature.

BISMARCK AND SCHURZ.

The Chancellor Expresses His Views on the Peace of Europe.

BERLIN, May 6.—It is stated that Prince Bismarck expressed to Carl Schurz the positive conviction that the peace of Europe should be maintained. The chancellor said he thought the re-instatement of Gen. Bogandovitch by the Russian government offered no ground for apprehension. He was confident that the czar's word would prove more powerful than that of Gen. Ignatieff, and his partisans. With regard to France, the chancellor said that the disturbance of peace through any of the Boulanger adventures, was out of the question. On this point he stood with such emphasis that Schurz gathered that Bismarck decided his views, which are so much at variance with those of the press, should be made known. Schurz has gone to Homburg. He will return here in June.

TO SEARCH FOR STANLEY.

Grave Fears That the Famous Explorer Has Met with Death.

LONDON, May 5.—The directors of the African Association have sent an order to Stanley Falls to send out a scouting party in search of Stanley, and to push the expedition with all possible speed. Although the promoters of the Stanley expedition declare, in their public utterances, that they will have no cause for alarm even if no news of the famous explorer reaches them for three months, their tone in private is full of great anxiety. A dispatch from Maj. Bartellot, commander of the camp at Arruwimi, to Col. Winter, urges the immediate formation of a caravan to look for Stanley. Maj. Bartellot has sent Prof. Jamison, the naturalist, on the expedition to Kosong, to collect men and stores, and return to Arruwimi, and as soon as enough have been obtained to fill the required number for a search party and to leave a guard at camp Maj. Bartellot will start. It is expected that this Stanley search expedition will start about the 1st of June.

THE ROYAL PATIENT.

His Condition Is Fairly Good—He is Feverish and Weak.

BERLIN, May 6.—The emperor was feverish during last night, and was frequently disturbed by an increased discharge of pus. His temperature rose to nearly thirty-nine. This morning it had fallen to 37.9. The emperor felt exhausted, and the doctors advised him not to leave the bed. To-day there has been no discharge of pus, and the patient had a tolerable quiet day. His face has a fairly healthy color, and his eyes were bright, but his breathing is, however, difficult and rapid. The emperor is always pleased when he makes himself understood by signals and whispers. He finds writing irksome. The empress has recovered from her attack of neuralgia. To-day she drove to Berlin to visit Empress Augusta.

Another abcess has broken in the emperor's throat.

TROUBLE IMPENDING.

Political Differences Cause Dissension in the Royal Artists' Society.

LONDON, May 6.—Trouble is impending in the Royal Society of British Artists, owing to political difficulties. Some of the members claim that the interests of the society are being sacrificed in order to gain aristocratic friends. President Warren was obliged to abandon his lecture on Palestine, at Oxford Music hall, London, this evening, the hall being filled with artists who jeered at his lecture and ridiculed him with dissolving views.

BOULANGER'S BOOK.

What He Has to Say About the German Invasion of '70.

PARIS, May 6.—The League of Patriots has issued a manifesto in which Boulanger is styled the leader of the national party. Two million copies of the first installment of Gen. Boulanger's work on the German invasion, which will be brought out next Tuesday, are to be distributed gratis throughout France. In the preface to his work, Boulanger again sets forth the Boulangist policy, and states that the object of the book is simply to draw profitable lessons from the events of 1870.

THE MOORISH TROUBLE.

Terms on Which the Sultan is Willing to Arbitrate.

TANGIER, May 5.—The sultan has agreed to submit the differences between his government and the United States to arbitration on the following terms: The differences shall be settled by an arbitration court. The Moorish government promises that no time shall be specified for the payment of personal or individual claims, debts or amounts due on credit. The condition that the [illegible] decision shall be subject to the sultan's approval is withdrawn.

ENGLAND.

Trying to Reorganize.

LONDON, May 5.—The court has ordered an adjournment of the hearing of the petition to liquidate the affairs of the American. Exchange in Europe with a view to the reconstruction of the concern.

LONDON, May 5.—The counsel for the American exchange announced to-day that the exchange had prepared a scheme of reconstruction, and believed it would be able to raise sufficient money to pay everybody. The creditors' counsel agreed to the proposition, provided that if the scheme of reconstruction is not realized, liquidation proceedings shall not be opposed at the hearing of the case.

The National Defense Bill.

LONDON, May 5.—The British national defense bill which the government will offer in parliament, provides for facilitating the summoning of the yeomen and volunteers, and gives the government procedure on the railways for naval and military purposes, without being obliged to go to the extreme step of taking possession of the roads. It also empowers them to make requisition for horses and vehicles, for which county courts shall determine the recompense.

A Letter from Gladstone.

LONDON, May 5.—Gladstone, in a letter, says the schism of the dissidents on the great question of Ireland, and the secondary, though highly important, question of the weakened powers of liberalism, have proved more disastrous than he could anticipate.

To be Wound Up.

LONDON, May 5.—The business of Morgan's New York exchange in London has been ordered wound up, under the supervision of the court.

Buffalo William Coming Home.

LONDON, May 6.—Col. Cody and his troupe sailed from Hull for New York this morning on a steamer of the Wilson line.

FRANCE.

A Traitor Convicted.

MARSEILLES, May 5.—Sergeant Major Chatclain was tried by court-martial to-day on a charge of trying to sell a new Lebel rifle and a number of cartridges to the German government. He was convicted and sentenced to imprisonment in the fortress, and to forfeiture of his rank and medal.

French Municipal Elections.

PARIS, May 6.—Municipal elections were held throughout France to-day. In Nantes twenty-four conservatives and nine republicans were returned, replacing twenty-four republicans and nine conservatives. In the Javel quarter of Paris, Chauviere, (revolutionary socialist) was elected.

Boulanger Turns Author.

PARIS, May 5.—Boulanger has sold the manuscript of his book on "German Invasion," for $40,000. The work will be published in periodical numbers.

CANADA.

To Act as Governor-General.

OTTAWA, May 5.—The cabinet has appointed Chief Justice Ritchie, of the supreme court, to act as administrator during the interregnum to arise between the departure of Lord Lansdowne and the arrival of the new governor-general.

The Canadian Debt.

MONTREAL, May 5.—The statement of the public debt of Canada, on the 30th of April last, shows a total gross debt of $276,632,163, with assets of $48,696,292, leaving a net debt of $227,935,870.

Newfoundland Wants the Treaty.

ST. JOHN, N. F., May 5.—The Newfoundland legislature, after discussing, with closed doors, the bill accepting the fishery treaty, passed the measure to the third reading.

CABLE NOTES.

The Press Protected.

VIENNA, May 5.—Deputy Von Schoenerer, who was charged with having forced his way into the office of the Neuwiener Tagblatt and assaulting the editors, has been deprived of his title, and sentenced to four month's imprisonment at hard labor, with compulsory fasts on certain days. His accomplice, Gerstgrasser, has been sentenced to two month's imprisonment with compulsory fasts.

Sound Sleep and Good Appetite.

BERLIN, May 5.—The emperor passed a tolerably good night and slept well. Early this morning he arose and received a verbal report from General Albedyle. His temperature during the past twenty-four hours has been the lowest since his fever began. He walked up and down his apartment. His appetite is good.

Minister Pendleton Recovered.

BERLIN, May 6.—George H. Pendleton, the United States minister, has fully recovered. He left Weisbaden yesterday and is residing at the Hotel of the Four Seasons, awaiting the arrival of his family.

Fight with Dacoits.

LONDON, May 6.—A dispatch from Mandalay says that the British force surprised a body of Dacoits near that place to-day and in the fight which ensued two of the officers and two privates were killed.

Quarantine Raised.

LIMA, May 6.—The government has declared Peruvian ports open to Chilian traffic, with the exception of ports between Valparaiso and Antofagsta, in which zone some cases of cholera are still reported.

Epidemic in Madrid.

MADRID, May 5.—An epidemic prevails in this city. It is feared that the disease is of a cholera nature, and its spread is attributed to the extreme heat and impure milk.

Disastrous Hail Storms.

LONDON, May 6.—Dispatches from India announce that Delhi and Moradabad had been visited by disastrous hail storms, about 150 persons having been killed.

PROF. MILLER'S APPOINTMENTS.

Prof. G. M. Miller, prohibition nominee for congress, will speak at Astoria this evening, Tuesday evening at St. Helens and Wednesday at Albina, and joins Mr. Gearin again at Oregon City on Thursday at 2 P. M. Prof. Miller deals with not only the prohibition of the liquor traffic, but with the labor problem, our national banking system, tariff revision, trusts and all the live issues of the day.

THE LAST DEMOCRATIC SENATE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

Has the United States senate ever been democratic, in majority, since Buchanan's administration. If so, what year?. Please answer through THE OREGONIAN?

M.

[There was a democratic majority of one in the United States senate from 1881 to 1883.]

AUTOMATIC ENGINES.

TACOMA, W. T., Feb. 25, 1888.

Messrs Russell & Co., Portland, Oregon—Gentlemen: We have been running the automatic engine bought of you for a week or more and so far we are much pleased with it. Our engineer says it is the best engine he ever run, and he has had extensive experience in building and running of engines. What he notices especially is its uniformity of action under varying load. He tested it with his speed indicator and found there was no change in the number of revolutions when the dynamo was plugged in or cut out.

Yours truly,

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Bishop Dubs's View of the Qualifications of a Preacher.

Sermon at Trinity Church by Rev. Mr. Costella —Evangelical Church Dedication in Albina Last Evening.

A very large concourse of people assembled at Zion's Evangelical church, East Portland, yesterday morning to hear Bishop R. Dubs a divine of great usefulness and prominence in the church.

The Sunday school was largely attended and efficiently conducted by the superintendent and his excellent corps of teachers. Rev. J. M. Beauchamp and Rev. H. I. Bittner delivered interesting addresses to the large number of scholars.

MORNING SERVICE.

On the platform were Bishop R. Dubs, D. D., Rev J. Bowersox and Rev. C C. Poling, presiding elders, and Rev. Sickafoose, of the United Brethren church. Bishop Dubs read Matthew, 28th chapter.

C. C. Poling announced the hymn, "My Faith Looks Up to Thee," after the singing of which Bishop R. Dubs led in a fervent and unctuous prayer.

The congregation then sang hymn No. 95.

The congregation gave the closest attention to the powerful and eloquent ordination sermon preached by the bishop. The spiritual power and burning eloquence of the speaker swayed and deeply impressed the vast audience. His text was taken from Acts 1:21, 21. He said the election of Matthias was hotly contested, and that famous expositors maintained that St. Paul was the real successor of Judas. His reasons for maintaining the validity of the election of Matthias were stated, as follows:

First—Paul was not an apostle of the Jewish apostleate, but of the Gentiles. His election was not supplementary.

Second—If Paul was the legitimate successor of Judas and was directly numbered with the twelve, how could he (Paul) make the agreement recorded in Galatians, second chapter.

Third—If the election of Matthias was illegal, the church of Christ began with a colossal blunder and crime.

The election of Matthias was graphically described, and some lessons from it were applied to the Christian ministry. He was elected to fill a vacancy occasioned by the apostasy of one of the highly privileged twelve. Judas fell—is falling yet, in spite of close proximity he enjoyed with Christ. If it was possible for Judas, after he preached and performed miracles for three years, to fall and forfeit his right to the highest gift within the power of Christ to confer, no minister can say he is not in danger of falling.

The objective environments of life make their lives probationary. Ministers, most of all, are in danger. In many instances their power and influence is suddenly eclipsed by a cloud of insufficiency and ineffectiveness, apparently without cause, but really because of ruptures between their hearts and their God.

The bishop said that when ministers do fall, they fall lower than other men—their state becomes as hopeless and black as the state of fallen women.

The speaker then dwelt upon the necessary qualifications demanded by the church, viz: First personal acquaintance with Jesus and his history; must be thoroughly acquainted with the bible. The lawyer must know Blackstone and Storey. The statesman must be acquainted with national and international law. The preacher must know the bible, be acquainted with the whole life of Christ and preach a comprehensive gospel. The preacher must not ride hobbies, get out of ruts he rounded, and then can never exhaust the word of God, which indeed an archangel cannot do. He must receive instruction from the Lord, soul instruction, study with Christ, and the bible becomes luminous. He must avail himself of all the preparation of both head and heart, but soul instruction direct from Christ is the essential qualification. He must not be a novice, not a separatist, not erratic, must not deprecate the historic church. Some are like gypsies—they go where they can get good meals—such better get out of the pulpit,

The speaker then proceeded to state how they determined on the election of an apostle, after the fundamental principles of election were laid down.

First they were brought forward, placed before the church and directed the attention of all to them for serious consideration. The church prayed that God should reveal his choice; recognized divine prerogative, divine power and prescience. They believed that God can and will reveal his choice.

The divine or supernatural qualification was dwelt upon. The power of the Holy Ghost, the impartation of the same to the hearts of the ministry, who is the executive of Deity. This is the highest manifestation of the life and power of God in his relation to the world. It secures the glorification of Christ in the church and believers, and secures the deepest personal appreciation of the salvation of Christ. The presence of the Holy Spirit also secures the complete organization of the church of Christ in its worldwide, universal aspect. He develops it, enriches it, equips it to go out and conquer the world for Christ, and denationalizes it in accordance with the universalization of redemption. The presence and power of the Holy Spirit gives faultlessness of character, arouses the intellect to activity, strengthens and adjusts it to right purposes and methods, influences the heart and gives official joy.

ORDINATION SERVICE.

At 2:30 P. M. Rev. J. M. Beauchamp and Rev. H. L. Pratt were ordained deacons, in harmony with the requirements of the church discipline. The ceremony was very impressive.

The bishop said to the class to be ordained: "I would rather see you in your coffins before me and preach your funeral sermons, and see your wives widows begging for bread and your children orphans, than to have you ever do anything that would bring disgrace on your families and cause them to die a terrible death by inches."

At the missionary meeting conducted by Bishop Dubs $600 was secured for home missions.

The conference will resume its work this morning at 8:30. Committees will report, and general conference business will be transacted.

At the close of the session Bishop Dubs will present the stationing committee's report. Conference will adjourn at about 3 P. M.

Saturday evening Rev. I. B. Fisher preached on "Faith," to the satisfaction of the large congregation.

TRINITY CHURCH.

Rev. Mr. Costella Discourses on Pure and Undefiled Religion.

Rev. H. C. E. Costella of Green Bay, Wis., who will occupy the pulpit of Trinity Episcopal church during Rev. G. W. Foote's absence, preached his first sermon yesterday morning, to a large congregation. His text was from St. James, 1:27

The apostle first tells us what religion or the service or practical worship of God, for so the word means, is not. It is not merely to hear the word; it is not, looking into its clear and truthful mirror, comparing our lives with its standard, and noting how far short they fall thereof, to be startled and to tremble, like Felix, and then to go away into the busy, bustling world, and fill our minds up with its pleasures or its cares, and make no effort to amend our errors or to make up our deficiencies; but on the contrary to forget entirely what manner of men we are. It is not to be a hearer and not a seerer, allowing the word to bring forth no fruit in our lives, using the tongue which has just been busied with the words of prayer and praise to pour unprofitable and vain discourse into ears which have but come from hearing of the sacred word or to be the vehicle for the utterance of angry, hateful scandalous and malicious thoughts, the instrument of treachery, deceit and guile, and so, leaving unbridled this unruly member, to be carried away by it, whither the evil promptings of our lower nature will. This is not religion. This is not worship. This is not God's service. Such is the word of God, the Holy Ghost, to us by the blessed James. Yet how much more than this is it to most of us. To go to church, to hear, to go away; and to forget, to bring no fruit to perfection. The religion of such a man is vain, useless, rash, wanton, irreverent and profane. He needs no devil to deceive him, for he is self-deceived—deceiveth his own heart.

Having set this before us plainly the apostle then gives as a test whereby to try the character of our religion whether it be of God or men, whether it be born of the spirit of the world or of the Holy Ghost, the sanctifier.

"Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world."

It is clear that the duties of the Christian lie in the world. "I pray not that thou shouldst take them out of the world, but that thou shouldst keep them from the evil." The leaven must be in the lump that the whole mass may be leavened. The light must not be hidden but so placed that all who enter in may see its shining and be lighted by its brightness.

Contact with the world is not to be shunned by God's servants. Such conduct on their part argues cowardice, distrust of his promised aid or of his power,—the weakness which springs from faithlessness. "This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith"—or the idleness which comes from hearts grown cold, from want of love for God and man—by mingling with the world, each one in his own proper sphere, where God has called him, discharging carefully the various duties which the social state imposes on him. Christians have an opportunity which they are to use as a means whereby to permeate society with all heavenly and gracious influences. There is no duty in this world, not one of the varied functions of this life, that he who has looked carefully and intently into the perfect law of liberty and continued therein, being not a forgetful hearer but a son of the world, will not fulfill, being thereto called with a graceful completeness not to be elsewhere, found, simply because the doing of it will be genuine and sincere, the outcome of a heart filled with God's grace.

In setting before us the ideal religious life, we note next that the apostle speaks first of outward duties—duties to our neighbors—acts of loving kindness and beneficence—to visit, with the purpose of ministering to the wants of the widow and the fatherless stands for all this class of Christian obligations. "If any man seeth his brother have need and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him?" To feel compassion is to suffer with another who is in want or pain, so that his sufferings are a grief to us.

The early Christians recognized the fact that they were God's trustees of that they had, and that the poor and needy, his afflicted children, had a right to share in their abundance. They made the communion of saints a real and tangible practice as much as a doctrine to be professed. The principles of Christianity are no way changed since then. Like its divine author, it is the same yesterday, to-day and forever.

The man who contents himself with an attendance at a Sunday service, heedless of his brethren who lie in suffering and in poverty about his doors, offers no worship undefiled to God, however loud his prayers or sanctimonious his mien. Zaccheus, the publican who gave half his goods to feed the poor and restored fourfold when perchance he had done one wrong, was more acceptable to the Master than the most learned scribe or the most punctilious pharisee who held him in contempt.

Nor is it enough to relieve such distress as thrusts itself upon our notice. He who would worship God aright must carry with him from the sanctuary that spirit which will lead him as a labor of love, and at the cost of self-denial, even when he is weary from his day's work, to seek out the unfortunate; to visit the widow and the fatherless in their affliction, when their needs are sorest, and thus become a messenger of God, a very angel of relief to those whose Father and whose God the Lord vouchsafes in an especial sense to be. There are none who by such zealous seeking as love prompts will fail to find some suffering to relieve, some sorrow to assuage, some loneliness to cheer, some heart, broken, bowed down and almost crushed, to strengthen by their Christian sympathy around their homes. and there are none above the condition of actual want who cannot give something to or do something for another, and even these can give their sympathy and do many a little act of personal service which will be very precious to the sorrowful and shall in no wise escape his eye who seeth all.

It will suffice for our present consideration of the outward duties of benevolence, these manifestations of good will from heaven to men, shining out in the world through the agency of the citizens of the heavenly city upon earth, if I remind you that they are to be done solely for Christ's sake and in his name as unto those he loves, whom he has left in charge of those who owe unto him not only all of earthly good they have, but the rich blessings of his spiritual gifts as well, yea their own souls, if we would have them constitute a daily worship, a loving service, well pleasing in his sight.

There must be no seeking of the praise of men. There must be no sounding of a trumpet. There must be no gratifying of a subtle vanity, or a more subtle love of self. There must be no more man love for his own sake, but the love of man for God's sake and the conscious acting as Christ's almoner, God's minister. There must be no admixture of any earthly thing in this service if we would have it a pure worship, a worship undefiled. Here, as in all things else, the motive only counts with God, and where this is pure love of God, where it is alive and active and growing in the heart, the Christian needs no urging to this blessed work. The busiest hands and heads find time, the poorest ways and means to labor thus for him they love, and when they present themselves within God's courts upon his holy day their prayers and alms and deeds of love go up together to the throne of grace, offered as a memorial to God by him who is the great high priest in heaven, together with his ceaseless intercessions for the sons of men.

CHURCH DEDICATION.

The Dedicatory Sermon Preached by Bisho Dubs in Albina last Night.

The Evangelical church of Albina was completed some time ago, but was not dedicated then for the reason that it was desired that Bishop Dubs should be present and dedicate the church. Rev. C. C. Poling first visited Albina and gathered together the scattered members of that denomination about two years ago. It then numbered eight members, but by constant effort on the part of Rev. Poling a church was organized and a building commenced. The membership now numbers over thirty, and they have a neat church edifice, situated on two lots. The indebtedness will likely all be paid off this year.

Last night the church was filled to hear the dedicatory sermon by Bishop Dubs, who spoke in his usual able and effective manner. He urged on all untiring devotion and consecration, and gave encouraging words to the church.

It is expected that this charge will be independent and have a regularly appointed pastor, but under the direction and patronage of the missionary society. For the past year it has been under the pastorage of Rev. L. P. Fisher and to his efficient work may be ascribed the advancement made.

DRS. DARRIN.

These Prominent Physicians Astound the Medical World of the Northwest by Their Wonderful Cures.

A few months ago the Drs. Darrin visited Portland as strangers, yet in that short space of time they have effected so many wonderful cures that their name is now known in every household on the coast. Their cures and operations were so quick and miraculous that some physicians of good standing were even willing to take their oaths that they were impossible. Now in a few months the doctors have had scores of cases from this vicinity and throughout the whole Northwest that prove the truth of their wonderful cures.

They submit the following card, which can be referred to, and could fill this page with home cures if we could spare the space:

DR. DARRIN—Sir: I am very thankful to you for the cure of a loathesome catarrh of the throat and nose which has troubled me for over three years. I have been troubled with a skin disease also for four years and never found relief until coming under your medical and electro-magnetic treatment. Also my wife is nearly cured of a complication of troubles peculiar to her sex. Refer to me at Knappa, Clatsop Co., Or.

J. S. RYCKMAN.

Office Hours and Place of Business.

The doctors can be consulted at 235 Fifth St., cor. Main, Portland, from 10 to 4 daily; evenings, 7 to 8; Sundays, 10 to 12. All curable chronic diseases, loss of manhood, blood taints, syphilis, gleet, gonorrhœa, stricture, spermatorrhœa, seminal weakness or loss of desire of sexual power in man or woman, catarrh and deafness, are confidentially and successfully treated. Cures of private diseases guaranteed. Circulars sent free. Most cases can receive home treatment after a visit at the Doctors' office.

TROUBLE IN THE HOUSE

Woodburn of Nevada Displays Power as a Debater.

THE COBDEN CLUB IN AMERICA.

The Discussion Winds up With a [illegible] Incident, in Which the Lie is Freely Passed—An Abundance of Banter.

WASHINGTON, May 5.—The house went into a committee of the whole on the tariff bill.

Bland, of Missouri, bitterly opposed the protective system, and denied that the cause of the progress of the country was to be weighed against pools and trusts, which he denounced as evils directly traceable to high tariff.

Woodburn, of Nevada, controverted the claim of the democrats that they only were a friend of the laboring man, and cited the fact that the democrats had inaugurated their entry into power by cutting down the salaries of 845 government employes; that their secretary of the treasury had reduced the pay of laborers at the San Francisco custom house, and that their secretary of the navy had seen fit to pare down the wages of the hod carriers at the Mare Island navy yard. He proceeded to make a speech bitterly denunciatory to the policy, which he said was outlined by the Mills bill, of surrendering American markets and American labor to the free traders of Great Britain. Turning his attention to the Cobden Club, Woodburn said it was an association of British manufacturers for the avowed purpose of destroying the protective tariff system in America and to facilitate the sale of British goods in American markets. It had established agencies in New York and Chicago for the distribution of British free-trade documents in the political canvasses of this country. On its roll of membership appeared the names of dukes and earls, marquises and lords, peers and counts and princes. He held in his hand a list of the members of the Cobden Club on January 1, 1883, and on the back of the book of record was the motto of the club, "Free Trade; Good Will Among Nations," and "God Save the Queen."

AMERICANS WHO ARE MEMBERS.

"He proceeded to read the list of members and caused much amusement by sandwiching the names of untitled American members between those of earls and dukes. The essential qualification of membership, he said, that the applicant for admission should be either a manufacturer or a political man. On the list of members he found the names of Senators Beck and Vance, William Endicott, Jr., of Boston, Mass., a cabinet officer of this republic, was admitted in 1887. This ought to create no surprise, for if common rumor reported him aright, he permitted no visitor to escape without inflicting on him an essay on the antiquity of his Anglo-Saxon ancestry, and the aristocratic color of his Puritanical blood.

Thomas F. Bayard was on the roll of American noblemen. Recently, when Chamberlain, in a speech in England, mentioned the name of Bayard, the cheers of the multitude drowned the voice of the orator. From his (Bayard's) acts and utterances, a stranger unacquainted with our form of government would be justified in concluding that he was acting in the dual capacity of American secretary of state and British envoy extraordinary.

Wm. R. Morrison was a member of the club. Was it a wonder that he was continually tinkering at tariff revision in the interest of Great Britain, that resulted always in stagnation of business, that engendered strikes, begot violence, and deprived him of his seat in congress?

Last, but not least, on the Cobden club's roll membership was that able and impartial parliamentarian, who possessed the almost God-like power of shaping the legislation of this country, the present speaker of the house, John Griffin Carlisle, who was comparatively a young member, having been elected in 1883.

These were a few of the names of the members who had combined to conquer and subdue American energy and enterprise. They shone out on the Cobden club list like apples of gold in pictures of silver.

AN UNFORTUNATE INTERRUPTION.

Bynum inquired whether Garfield had been a member of the club.

Woodburn replied in the negative.

Bynum—Is not Murat Halstead, the friend of Senator Sherman, a member of it?

Woodburn (holding up the list)—There is not a republican to-day in public life on the rule of membership of the Cobden club. [Applause.]

Bynum denied that the list was a true one.

Woodburn replied that it was a true copy of the last one published.

Bynum—Then those names have been removed.

Farquhar, of New York—By what authority do you make that statement?

Bynum—Halstead is a member, because I have it from a member of the club.

Woodburn—Here is the record.

Continuing, Woodburn said it was strange that the roll of American noblemen did not contain the name of the democratic secretary of the treasury who, by a stroke of his pen had permitted a Canadian railway, subsidized by a foreign government to the extent of $300,000,000, to carry freight and passengers across American territory, and to compete with American lines, thereby crippling their ability to pay their just debts to the government.

TIM CAMPBELL, OF NEW YORK.

He was agreeably disappointed at not finding among the names of American noblemen, the distinguished gentleman from New York, Hon. Tim. Campbell. That gentleman had once been a zealous protectionist, and in the trying moments when the Morrison bill came up for consideration, he voted twice with the republican column. But his conversion was almost as miraculous and sudden as that of Saul of Tarsus. A blinding light from the White house fell upon him and a new faith was born within him. His party recanted his errors, supplicated Mr. Morrison for a pardon, was baptized in the [illegible] waters of free trade, and with all the [illegible] of a new convert he, in [illegible] voted the third time the other way.

What he (Woodburn) said here to-day might be regarded as sounding brass and tinkling cymbals, but, as an humble member of this body, he was prompted by a strong sense of duty to propound [illegible] to the American people, for their solemn answer—whether the chairmanship of the ways and means committee, the speakership of the American house of representatives and membership in the Cobden club were consistent and compatible positions. [Applause.] He was anxious to know if adopted citizens of Irish birth and their descendants would continue to perpetuate in power by their votes a party whose leading members voted for Cobden free trade. Cobden free trade meant that parliamentary independence of Ireland was entirely valueless. Could adopted citizens of Irish birth knowingly support for the high office of president of the United States Grover Cleveland, when they were informed by London cable dispatches that the surplus fund of the Cobden Club was [illegible] tended as a reinforcement for him in [illegible] efforts to control the American markets and hand them over to the British trade? Could they still cling to the party, which [illegible] on empty but attractive sound, that pointed with pride to its prime minister, Thomas F. Bayard, and that held out as shining example of its confidence, patriotism and fidelity an ex-member of the house who had apologized to the British minister at Washington for his contemptible duplicity in introducing a resolution of inquiry as to the legality of the trial of American citizens condemned and sentenced by a British judge and British court? He referred to Abram S. Hewitt, a democratic lawyer of the democratic city of New York.

AN IMPROBABLE HYPOTHESIS.

If Cleveland stood by his letter of acceptance and refused renomination, no democrat could better reflect the aims, hopes and aspirations of the democratic party than A. S. Hewitt. Did not adopted citizens know that it was the republican, and not the democratic party, which had exploded the British doctrine of "once a subject, always a subject"? Had they forgotten that in 1868 a republican congress [illegible] to the nations of the earth its mandate to the effect that thereafter every American citizen of foreign birth could come over God's footstool [illegible] from harm and hindrance [illegible] step he [illegible] the protection of the stripes, and [illegible] ed during the [illegible] party was [illegible] [Applause.]

He (Woodburn) would be disappointed if the distinguished member from Massachusetts (Collins) did not rise in his [illegible] tative of his race, did not rise [illegible] of the debate and denounce the [illegible] bill, in view of the fact that a few years ago he was president of a national association that, over his signature, issued a circular ordering its members to boycott every article of British manufacture. [Applause and laughter.]

He addressed himself to Tarsney of Michigan, and reminded him that it was destructive of the protective system of England that drove his ancestors to Michigan, and it was impossible for him to be a member of the American congress. His friend was barred out of the Cobden club because he was neither a nobleman nor a manufacturer. [Laughter.]

Every time the democratic dagger ran into the tariff schedule it struck down an American industry. The United States without the protective tariff could compete with England only by paying English wages. It could compete with China only by feeding its workmen on rice, and paying them 10 cents a day. [Applause.] The Mills bill was a direct assault at labor. The title should be amended so as to read: "A bill to destroy American industry, degrade American labor, introduce the sweating system into this country, and for other purposes." [Applause.]

In conclusion he said that his reading of the history of this country compelled him to say that the American protective tariff system had been stamped with the approval of every leading statesman of the nation.

A SCENE OF GREAT CONFUSION.

As Woodburn concluded speaking, Bryce of New York crossed the main aisle and excitedly denounced, as misrepresentation, Woodburn's allusions to Hewitt.

Woodburn—I have said nothing but what [illegible].

"It is false!" exclaimed Bryce.

"That is what a democrat always does," [illegible] Houck of Tennessee, amid laughter.

Several republicans stated that what Woodburn had said was a matter of record and a matter of notoriety.

Bayne of Pennsylvania who was seated within a foot or two of Bryce, suddenly [illegible] into the controversy, and shaking his finger in front of Bryce's face, said: "[illegible] acknowledged it on the floor of the house and apologized for it. I offered a resolution to investigate. So when you say that [illegible] is false (referring to Woodburn) says an [illegible] when you say what is false."

At this moment the house was in a state of great confusion, and members crowded around the two gentlemen, who, facing one another, continued the angry colloquy, which was not, however, intelligible.

"Is this the senate of the United States?" inquired Mr. Hopkins of Illinois finally, in an aggrieved speaking tone which set the house in a roar, and which poured oil upon the troubled waters, for in a few moments Bayne and Bynum were sealed together and talking amicably.

Bynum, of Indiana, said that when the gentleman from Nevada (Woodburn) was reading the list of members of the Cobden club he had propounded to him a question as to whether Garfield, when he lived, was not a member of the Cobden Club, as well as Murat Halstead. The gentleman had replied that no republican living was a member of that club.

Buchanan interrupted to declare that Woodburn had been incorrectly quoted. What he did say was that no prominent republican in public life was a member of the club.

Bynum said he had a revised list of members of the Cobden Club, showing that Murat Halstead had been admitted in 1880. It also showed the name of Hugh McCulloch, former republican secretary of the treasury, admitted in 1871; of Stanley Matthews, admitted in 1875, a member of the U. S. supreme court, and appointed by Garfield, no doubt, for the reason that he was a member of the Cobden Club. Here are also the names of Theodore Roosevelt and Cyrus W. Field, and a number of others. "I will not read them, because the gentlemen would denounce them as mugwumps."

Buchanan—Most of them are.

Bynum—Garfield's name appears in the edition of 1871 as being admitted in 1869.

Bayne—He repudiated his connection with the club, and said he was elected without his consent or knowledge. (Derisive laughter on the democratic side).

Farquhar, of New York—And Roosevelt has recanted.

Bayne—Asked if the gentleman did not know, as every newspaper reader knew, that President Garfield had publicly and repeatedly repudiated any connection with the Cobden club. That his election was a compliment paid to him without his knowledge, and that he absolutely refused to become a member.

Bynum—It was a compliment paid to him on account of the sentiment he expressed. When and where did he repudiate it?

Bayne promised to produce abundant proof of his statements.

Russell of Connecticut—I would like to ask the gentleman from Indiana whether J. S. Moore, known as "Parsee" Moore, member of the Cobden club, was not, as I am informed, the author of the Mills bill?

Bynum—The authors of the Mills bill are the majority of the ways and means committee.

Russell—Has not "Parsee" Moore been the controlling spirit of the majority of the ways and means committee?

Breckinridge—If the gentleman will take the responsibility of making the charge on his own veracity, then we will make issue.

Buchanan asked if the gentleman would [illegible] that the minority members of the committee were not admitted to meetings of the majority when the bill was in preparation.

Breckinridge replied with a question whether the gentleman referred to a [illegible] meeting of the majority held for consultation.

Buchanan—Ah! the gentlemen held secret meetings, did they? I am glad the gentleman confess the secrecy of their meetings.

Breckinridge replied, amid democratic applause, that surely the gentlemen did not [illegible] the majority of the committee expected [illegible] to agree with them in their efforts [illegible] taxation.

OTHER SPEECHES.

[illegible] of Pennsylvania took the [illegible] himself largely to criticism of the [illegible] section of the bill. He wanted to know what the scheme of the majority of the committee on ways and means was, if it was not a free trade scheme.

[illegible] of Mississippi defended the bill. [illegible] to the recent strikes, and said [illegible] American labor attempted to resist [illegible], Pinkerton was telegraphed to, [illegible] came a host of minions at $10 a [illegible] and these American citizens went out [illegible] with revolvers in their faces, [illegible] in the hands of ruffians.

[illegible]—Is it not true that all these men [illegible] employed Pinkerton detectives in [illegible] are free traders, headed by [illegible] of this house, Corbin of New York, [illegible] of Pennsylvania—all free traders?

[illegible]—I am not the guardian of [illegible]; I regard him as amply able to take care of himself; but I do know that it was [illegible] laborer that was at the muzzle of the gun, and that it was American capital [illegible] the breech. I don't care whether [illegible] Corbin or anybody else. I [illegible] I believe to be the truth.

The committee then rose, and the house [illegible]

THE CHINESE TREATY.

[illegible] by the Senate Considered Somewhat Doubtful.

WASHINGTON, May 5.—Developments in the session of the senate regarding the [illegible] have given rise to an assertion that the document will be rejected. [illegible] Mitchell and Senator Teller, of [illegible], actively opposing its ratification, [illegible] rather blue, and, as both gentlemen come from the West, their words [illegible] considerable influence with Eastern senators, especially those who oppose [illegible] legislation whatever on the subject. [illegible], of Oregon, in signing the report of the [illegible] relations committee favoring its [illegible], is, of course, accepted as having [illegible] himself on the subject.

A STATUE OF WASHINGTON.

[illegible] and Distinguished Audience in the National Theater.

WASHINGTON, May 5.—The National theater was crowded to-night with a notably distinguished and brilliant audience. The occasion was the performance under the auspices of President and Mrs. Cleveland and a committee of [illegible] prominent in social life of the [illegible], for the benefit of a fund with which it is proposed to purchase a statue of George Washington, for presentation to the French [illegible]. The stage attraction was Steele [illegible] drama of "Paul Kauver," [illegible] performed under his personal [illegible] by the entire New York company. [illegible] occupants of private boxes were the president and wife, Senator and Mrs. Jones of Nevada, with Miss Bayard and the French minister as their guests; Chinese minister and suite, Postmaster-General and Mrs. Dickinson, Senator and Mrs. Hearst of California, and Gen. and Mrs. Sherman. The body of the house was filled with people of fashion and official distinction. The theater was draped with American flags, furnished by Gen. Sheridan, and French flags sent from the consulate at New York at the request of Mr. Rouston, French minister.

WHY DWIGHT WAS REMOVED.

Because He Discriminated in Favor of Some and Pointedly Against Others.

NEW YORK, May 5.—A Washington special to the Mail and Express this afternoon says that Librarian Theodore F. Dwight, of the state department, was removed from office, not because of his politics, but because of the charges made in the Commercial Gazette, that he discriminated against certain persons wishing to obtain access to documents. William Henry Smith, general manager of the associated press, is writing a political history. He has tried in vain for six years to get at documents. During that time Henry Cabot Lodge and C. M. Adams, with the latter of whom Dwight lives, have had their pick of such material, for use in historical works that they have been writing.

There was no objection to these gentlemen having all the facilities and data needed for their works, but Smith could not get any, and he protested against Dwight's discrimination. Blaine, when secretary of state, gave Smith an order for what he wanted, but it was diplomatically ignored; so has every other order been, from the succeeding secretary and assistant secretary down to and including Bayard.

THE WHEAT SHORTAGE.

An Explanation on the Recent Advance in Price.

WASHINGTON, May 5.—The Herald this morning prints telegrams from the leading wheat centers of the United States, showing its immense shortage. The estimate of the deficit is from 50,000,000 to 80,000,000 bushels in four of the leading states, and California's decrease is placed at 50 per cent. Ohio, Michigan, Indiana and Illinois show a decrease of about one-half the usual crop, that of Illinois being estimated at 25,000,000 bushels at the outside.

WASHINGTON NEWS ITEMS.

The C. P. Will Escape Legislation.

WASHINGTON, May 5.—The members of the house committee on Pacific railroads have about concluded that no bill can be completed at this session of congress providing for refunding the debt due the government by the Central Pacific. A member of the committee said to-day: "The Outhwaite bill, which covers the case of the Union Pacific, is all we can hope to handle this session. We shall be fortunate if we can secure time to consider and pass it."

Nothing But Brown Paper.

WASHINGTON, May 5.—A package was received at the treasury department to-day from the American Exchange National bank, of New York, purporting to contain $41,000 in bank notes, but when opened nothing but brown paper was found within. The package was returned to the bank.

Inner Sack Exchanges.

WASHINGTON, May 5.—Instructions have been issued to the postmasters of Portland, Oregon, and Seattle, Washington, to make inner sack exchange between their offices daily, beginning on the 13th inst., and including thereafter Sundays.

Miss Liberty Needs More Funds.

WASHINGTON, May 5.—Henry F. Spaulding, treasurer of the American committee of the statue of Liberty, is urging upon members of congress an appropriation of $50,000 to complete the arches and the stairway of the pedestal.

Superintendent Nash Resigns.

WASHINGTON, May 5.—F. E. Nash, general superintendent of the railway mail service, has tendered his resignation to the postmaster-general, to take effect when his successor is appointed.

THE METHODIST CONFERENCE.

Continuation of the Debate on the Admission of Women.

NEW YORK, May 5.—Interest in the Methodist Episcopal conference increases daily. To-day there was a larger audience present than on any previous day. Bishop J. F. Hurst presided.

The order of business was suspended for the purpose of giving the committee on rules an opportunity to report. A number of amendments were made to the rules. They were unimportant but created much discussion. Various committees were then announced.

Gen. Clinton B. Fiske then took the floor to advocate the admission of women. Gen. Fisk contended that there was nothing in the law of the church which says lay delegates shall not be women. It would be revolutionary to turn the women out by a vote of the general conference, and the church could not afford to exclude them. "Are we so cowardly," asked Gen. Fiske, "that we would refuse to admit a woman for fear that she would fill the place of a man?"

Rev. R. J. Kynett, secretary of the church extension society, favored the admission of women, and said that the Baptists and the Congregationalists admitted them to their conferences.

Rev. D. H. Moore, of the Colorado conference, contended that women should not be admitted. In closing, Dr. Moore offered a substitute to the previous substitutes. The substitute provided that during the month of October, 1890, a general election should be held in each church, and that all the members be called upon to vote, either for or against the admission of women as lay delegates. Should a majority of the church be in favor of the admission of women as lay delegates, then the general conference in 1892 can complete the change.

Rev. A. C. Pendleton moved the previous question.

Considerable excitement existed while the vote was being taken. When the announcement was made, it was discovered that the motion was lost. The vote stood 132 ayes, to 187 nays. After some discussion, an adjournment was had till Monday.

HANLAN AGAIN DEFEATED.

Kemp Wins on the Paramatta, in Spite of Adverse Circumstances.

SYDNEY, N. S. W., May 5.—The sculling match over the Paramatta course to-day, between Peter Kemp, of Australia, and Edward Hanlan, of Canada, was won by Kemp by five lengths. Kemp took the lead at the start. Hanlan's boat came in contact with that of his opponent before the mile post was reached. Kemp stopped and let Hanlan pass and then went after him. When off Gasoign's bay Hanlan crossed the bow of Kemp's boat and again fouled him. Kemp got cleared and proceeded, winning by five lengths. An enormous crowd was present. The race was for $2500 a side and the championship of the world.

A DRIVE.—If all our citizens combined cannot build a hotel, the individual business firms at least show sufficient energy to build up their own enterprises and at the same time benefit the city. As an illustration, look at the elegant carriage repository of Messrs. Staver & Walker, at their commodious quarters in the New Market block. This repository is really a credit to the city, being superior to anything of the kind on the coast in appointments, fitting and accommodation for patrons, while the display of fine vehicles therein is unexcelled, save perhaps in the largest centers of wealth and commerce, such as New York and Chicago. Some of these carriages are real gems—for instance a magnificent landau, the finest ever seen in Portland, beautiful phaetons and fine speeding wagons, trotting sulkies as well as every style of buggy, carriage and cart in use. These vehicles are displayed to the best advantage, their arrangement showing no little taste and knowledge of effect. Their display of harness, whips, robes and carriage furnishings is also very complete, and should do away with the necessity of our citizens sending East for anything in the vehicle and harness line. As a valuable object lesson it is well worth the time of any one to visit this handsome repository, being not only interesting and attractive in itself, but worthy of note as being the outcome of unusual business energy and good taste.

FINE PAINTINGS.—In Gump's window may be seen some magnificent work of Mrs. Annette Butler Averill, one a portrait in oil of a bull, the other, Cupids blowing bubbles. The masterly skill of the artist is also to be seen in a painting of a water-spaniel in the most difficult of all poses, now in Hudson's gun store.

A Murderer Hanged by a Mob in California.

A DEADLY DUEL BETWEEN WOMEN.

A Democrat Who Loves the Prohibitionists—A Cold-Blooded Murder in This State—California Notes.

ST. HELENA, Cala., May 5.—John Wright, who shot and killed Budd Vann in this town two weeks ago, was taken from jail early this morning by a mob of masked men and hanged to the bridge at the head of Main street.

Wright had been confined in the county jail at Napa since the shooting, but was brought here yesterday for preliminary examination. No one suspected an attempt at lynching would be made. At 1 o'clock this morning Justice Elgin, who had the jail keys, was called to his door, surrounded by the mob and forced to give the keys up. The crowd then took the prisoner from the jail and in ten minutes his body was hanging from the bridge. No arrests have been made, but the tragedy is deplored by all law abiding citizens.

The shooting of young Vann occurred near a house of ill-fame. Vann and some companions were standing near by when some one threw rocks at the window. Wright, who was a brother of an inmate, was in the house at the time, and immediately fired a pistol shot, striking Vann.

PARTICULARS OF THE LYNCHING.

Following is a more detailed statement: The keys of the jail were in charge of the justice, who was aroused from his slumbers about 1 o'clock this morning by a loud knocking at the front door of his home. The justice hurriedly dressed himself and opened the door. To his surprise and consternation he found himself confronted by a crowd of masked men, who were all armed. Elgin tried to close the door, but he was too late, for one of the mob had crossed the threshold, and, catching him roughly, demanded that he surrender the keys of the jail. The justice refused, and tried to reason with the mob not to commit any breach of the law, but they were resolute, and his appeals fell on unwilling ears.

Elgin, seeing that it was useless to longer parley with them, gave up the keys.

The leader of the mob then quietly led the way to the jail where Wright was sleeping in his cell. The lynchers worked in a quiet manner, and it was evident that they had carefully planned every movement in carrying out their designs.

Wright uttered a shriek of terror when the leader threw open the cell door and roughly caught him by the arm, and dragged him out into the corridor. The party then left the jail as quietly as they had entered it, and turned into Main street.

Wright was so badly frightened that he was unable to raise any alarm, and he nearly fainted before he was rushed out into the cool night air. His lips quivered, his eyes were dilated with fear, and his quaking legs almost refused to support him.

The lynchers grouped themselves around the young murderer, so that there would be no chance for him to escape. The lynchers moved along like so many specters of the night. Not a word was spoken among them.

The objective point of the mob was the Main street bridge, and no time was lost in reaching there. Scarcely a quarter of an hour had passed from the time the lynchers had compelled the justice to surrender the keys of the jail until the murderer was standing on the bridge which was to be his scaffold.

The leader called for a rope, and one of the men drew a large coil from under his coat. A noose was prepared, and while some of the men were busy adjusting it around Wright's neck, others were rapidly fastening the other end to one of the stringers of the bridge. The knot was tested and found to be secure. The noose was tightly drawn around the murderer's neck, and the next instant his body was dangling at the end of the rope.

NO CLUE TO THE PERPETRATORS.

The streets have been thronged with people discussing this morning's tragedy. The body of deceased was left by the lynchers swinging from the bridge, and was viewed by passers-by until about 8 o'clock this morning, when an undertaker cut it down by order of the district attorney. The sheriff and coroner were early on the ground, trying to get some evidence of the perpetrators of the outrage.

At the coroner's inquest this afternoon no new few facts were brought out, and there is no clue obtainable. The jury brought in a verdict to the effect that John Wright came to his death by violence at the hands of unknown persons, and they severely censured the peace officers of the town for gross neglect of duty in leaving the jail unguarded.

DEADLY DUEL BETWEEN WOMEN.

Two New Mexican Girls Pull Triggers Over an Admirer.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 5.—A Chronicle special from San Marcial, N. M., says: Some days ago Miss Sarah Bolton and Miss Mary Lemoore, of Luna valley, fought a duel with pistols, to decide their claims to a mutual admirer, and Miss Bolton received a flesh wound in the shoulder, which confined her to her room for a few days. Word is received to-day that she again encountered her rival, near the latter's home, and pulling her veil closely to her face, in order to conceal her features, walked rapidly up to Miss Lemoore, and without a word, drew her pistol and fired twice. One shot entered the left side, just below the arm pit, ranging through the heart and lungs, and made its exit on the right. The other made only a flesh wound in the shoulder. The unfortunate girl expired almost immediately. Miss Bolton walked triumphantly away, and related to her friends what she had done. She is detained, waiting the arrival of officers.

"GOD BLESS THE PROHIBITIONISTS."

The Sentiment of a Democrat Who Wants to Vote for Horatio Seymour.

JACKSONVILLE, Or., May 5.—The democratic convention was held here to-day. A hot fight was made for most of the important offices. Following is the ticket nominated: Representatives, R. A. Miller, J. T. Bowditch and W. K. Price; county judge, J. R. Neil; clerk, Horace Pelton; sheriff, B. W. Dean; commissioners, Charles Taylor and Ben Haymond; treasurer, T. R. Moore; assessor, M. D. Childers; school superintendent, H. Mitchell; surveyor, James Jeffrey; coroner, Dr. R. Pryce.

"GOD BLESS THE PROHIBITIONISTS."

In an opening speech in the democratic convention held here to-day, Judge Willard Crawford, a Medford delegate, after declaring himself in favor of the nomination of Horatio Seymour as candidate for president of the United States, said: "Oregon will go democratic this year, and I will tell republicans the reason why. The prohibition party is well organized throughout the state, and its efforts will give the election to the democracy. God bless the prohibitionists." This sentiment met with the approval of the convention, the members of which cheered it to the echo.

A COLD-BLOODED MURDER.

An Oregon Sheepherder Shoots a Bartender at Paislee.

LAKEVIEW, Or., May 5.—Harry Brown, a sheepherder, left his flock Monday and went to Paislee, in this county, and engaged in a game of cards with one Fisher, in a saloon. A dispute arose as to who was winner of the game, and the decision was left to Thomas Shick, the bartender, who decided in Fisher's favor. This seemed to madden Brown, who went to his sheep camp, secured a rifle and returned to town. He went to the saloon, and without warning fired at Shick, who was standing behind the bar, not six feet distant. The bullet struck Shick in the forehead, killing him instantly. Brown was arrested and held to answer without bail.

IMPRISONMENT FOR LIFE.

Judge Toohy in Sentencing Bateman Tells Him He Ought to Hang.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 5.—Thomas N. Bateman, private in the Second United States cavalry, who murdered Sergeant Soper at the Presidio, was sentenced to-day to imprisonment for life at San Quentin.

The court was not at all lenient in its remarks to the condemned man. After detailing the crime, Judge Toohy said: "It was a most grievous blunder that the jury did not bring in a proper verdict, which would have subjected you to the extreme penalty of the law. No crime has ever been brought to my attention that was wrought out with more studied atrocity. Bearing some unexplained grudge against your superior, you lay in wait for him with a loaded rifle, and shot him cruelly and deliberately when he came into your dormitory, on the morning of the 5th of July. You have requested to be sent to Folsom, but I will not send you there. I know your reason for the request. Folsom offers opportunities for escape that San Quentin does not."

Bateman was then sentenced to San Quentin for the term of his natural life. He took his sentence as he did his conviction, with the air of one who is thankful that it is no worse.

PARALYZED BY A BLOW.

The Disastrous Ending of a Row at Democratic Primaries.

VIRGINIA, Nev., May 5.—Miles Finten and Dave Pyne had a dispute at the democratic primaries to-day and agreed to settle it with their fists. When they arrived on the ground selected for the battle Finten struck Pyne a blow on the neck with the handle of a heavy dirk or butcher knife. The blow felled Pyne to the ground, and his right side is paralyzed. He is unable to articulate, and physicians say the blow will prove fatal. Finten was placed under bonds. Both men were prominent in local politics.

SPRECKELS AND HIS EMPLOYES.

A Farewell Reception Tendered the Sugar King of the Pacific.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 5.—About 1000 employes of Claus Spreckels's sugar refinery tendered him a farewell reception at Turn Verein hall this evening, prior to his departure for Philadelphia Monday, where he will hereafter permanently reside. Resolutions were passed commending his action in refusing to enter the sugar trust.

CALIFORNIA.

San Francisco Notes.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 5.—The sentences of Hamberg and Pilcher, the real estate swindlers, were continued this morning until next Wednesday, and Attorney Duprey is preparing an argument for a new trial. Hamberg's case will probably go to the supreme court on appeal.

The books for subscriptions to shares of the Nevada bank, opened last Monday, were closed at noon to-day. The scheme was not a success as regards full subscription to the stock, though considerable inquiry has been awakened. It is possible that the books will be opened next week.

Daniel Wyckoff, ship-joiner, fell from the maintop of a vessel this morning to the deck, fracturing his skull. It is thought he will die.

James Matheson was engaged in riveting pipes being laid by the Spring Valley Water Company to-day and, while inside a pipe, a steel rivet was driven in with terrific force, striking him upon the head and penetrating the skull.

Alaska Needs Better Government.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 5.—Says an evening paper: The report of Gov. Swineford, the affidavit of Isaac Anderson, and the communication of the secretary of the treasury to the house, show on their face that the Alaska Commercial Company has added to the income of the general government, oppressed the natives of Alaska and the people on the Pacific coast, and that the authority of the United States in that distant territory has been made a reproach to the government by the conduct of some of its representatives. Is it not about time that congress provided some respectable and efficient government for Alaska?

Asked to Resign.

LOS ANGELES, May 5.—Gen. John R. Matthews, of this city, to-day received a letter from Gov. Waterman asking that he resign his position as brigadier-general of the National Guard of California. The letter contained no charges and gave no reasons, and was a complete surprise to Gen. Matthews. It is understood that the general will demand that charges be preferred, or that at least some reasons be given for the request.

For a Fine Methodist College.

MARYSVILLE, May 5.—A project has been placed on foot for the erection of a fine Methodist college at Sutter City. It is proposed to raise $60,000 for the building and an endowment of $25,000 for land. The land endowment has been already promised by farmers of the county. A public meeting has been called for next Wednesday, at the county court house, to take steps toward carrying the project into execution.

The Queen of the Pacific.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 5.—The tug Monarch left here to-day for Port Harford, to assist the Wizard in towing the Queen of the Pacific here Monday.

OTHER COAST DISPATCHES.

News Items From Salem.

SALEM, Or., May 5.—Gov. Pennoyer has appointed the following notaries public: A. E. McFarland, Elkton, Douglas county; J. R. Stoddard, Portland; A. V. Davis, Molalla; C. B. Moore, Salem; B. H. Springer, Amity, Yamhill county.

The following articles of incorporation have been filed with the secretary of state: Lostine Milling Company, incorporators, Wm. Womack, George J. Bowman, Press Halley, R. C. Mays, F. E. Parkyn and John Rinehart; capital stock, $8000, location, Lostine, Wallowa county. Siskiyou Gem Mining Company; incorporators, J. M. McCoy, H. Clay Meyers and Fred. V. Holman; capital stock, $60,000; principal office, Portland. First Congregational church of Ashland; incorporators, J. E. Smith, George C. Eddings, M. N. Hartwell and L. M. Dean, trustees; value of property, $2000.

A special meeting of the city council was held to-night, to consider the proposition of Receiver Koehler, of the O. & C. railroad, to change the location of the depot from the present site to near the head of Court street. He offers to make the removal if the city will grant him the use of Twelfth street, secure absolute title to the present depot grounds, and the site for the new depot. The council appointed a special committee of Mayor Murphy, Recorder Strickler and City Attorney Bingham to investigate the matter.

The republicans of the Waldo hills held an enthusiastic rally at Whittaker to-day. The attendance was good, and addresses were made by John Minto, F. J. Babcock, T. T. Geer, A. O. Condit, Capt. Ormsby and J. A. Hunt.

Vancouver's Credit Good.

VANCOUVER, B. C., May 5.—The finance committee of the city council opened tenders for the purchase of $150,000 debentures, bearing 6 per cent., running forty years, and accepted the offer of the Bank of Montreal for the same, at the price of 104, principal and interest payable in London. The price obtained shows the high credit of the city, and the confidence felt by capitalists in the future of Vancouver.

THE POPE'S RESCRIPT.

A Protest from a Meeting Presided Over by the Lord Mayor of Dublin.

DUBLIN, May 5.—At the request of Catholic members of parliament, the lord mayor of Dublin convened a meeting to-day for the purpose of discussing the pope's rescript.

Resolutions were adopted traversing the statements by which the pope justified his rescript and assuring his holiness of unalterable attachment to him in his spiritual capacity; but firmly and respectfully, but emphatically refusing to recognize his right to intervene in Irish politics.

Meetings will be held throughout West Clare to-morrow to protest against the papal rescript on the ground that the pope is ignorant of the sufferings of the people of Clare.

POTITICAL NOTES.

Utah Democartic Convention.

SALT LAKE, Utah, May 5.—The democratic territorial convention at Ogden elected P. L. Williams and R. C. Chambers delegates to the St. Louis convention. Mormon delegates were excluded, the convention declaring that neither members of the people's or any other party could be democrats. The resolutions oppose theocratic rule, oppose the admission of Utah as a state, and endorse President Cleveland; thanks to the majority of the Utah commission and Gov West for their reports on Utah, especially their protest against statehood for Utah.

Presidential Preferences.

NEW YORK, May 5.—The Mail and Express has obtained the following presidential preferences of the elector candidates in New York, New Jersey and Connecticut: Chauncey M. Depew, 88; James G. Blaine, 69; Walter Q. Gresham, 10, John Sherman, 6; Robert L. Lincoln, 5; William B. Allison, 4; Joseph R. Hawley, 3; Philip H. Sheridan, 2; Benj. Harrison, Frank Hiscock, Wm. M. J. Sewell, Leland Stanford and B. F. Butler each 1.

Postoffice Established.

WASHINGTON, May 5.—A postoffice was today established at Lee, Coos county, Oregon, and William P. Marsh was appointed postmaster.

THE BLAINE SENSATION

Chairman Jones Talks All Around the Statement.

BLAINE WILL BE FELT AT CHICAGO.

How the Assertion Was Received by the Politicians at Washington—The "Tribune" Declares That it is the Merest Bosh.

PITTSBURG, May 5.—In an interview to-day Chairman Jones, of the national republican executive committee, said that so far as Blaine's health was concerned, he was as well as he ordinarily is. He said: "Blaine has not decided to be a candidate. He has not asked his friends to make an aggressive movement in his behalf. He has not written any letters declining the nomination a second time, and it is not true that he will be on the ocean and out of reach of the telegraph when the Chicago convention is in session. Blaine said he desired to remain abroad two years, but feared that he would not be able to do so. I would not be surprised to hear he was coming home next month, or that he would stay until next year. There is no denying the fact that ever since the declination there has been a growing sentiment among republicans that Blaine should accept the leadership of the party in the next great battle. This movement has great strength, and will be a powerful, if not the most powerful element in the next convention. I do not think it is the intention of Blaine to come out squarely for any candidate. He is only human, and may, of course, say, 'So and so is my friend, and I would like to see him nominated,' and such an expression would have great weight."

WHAT THE "TRIBUNE" SAYS.

The Statement Is "Chiefly Bosh—Mere Goose-Feed."

NEW YORK, May 5.—The Tribune prints the Philadelphia Times letter about Blaine, which stated that the friends of Blaine have, within the last three days, received direct from him his assent to an aggressive movement to his renomination for president, and his assurance that if nominated in the face of his Florence letter of declination he would not feel at liberty to decline, with the following head: "A Silly Letter About Blaine—An Alleged Discovery that Mr. Blaine has Consented to a Movement for his Renomination." At the foot of the letter is the following editorial note: "We print the above only that our readers may know the sort of tales people are telling. It is, of course, like the recent stuff about Mr. Blaine's dreadful state of health—chiefly bosh, mere goose-feed."

WHITELAW REID INTERVIEWED.

NEW YORK, May 5.—"The comments in today's Tribune reflect my sentiments exactly," said Whitelaw Reid, the editor, to a reporter of the World, as he pointed out the paragraph. It said the story of the Philadelphia Times' correspondent was like the recent stuff about Mr. Blaine's dreadful state of health—chiefly bosh.

Continuing, Mr. Reid said: "I do not know that I need say any more. There is nothing to the story."

"Then you believe Blaine will not be a candidate?"

"He has done all in his power to prevent it. He was perfectly sincere in withdrawing his name from consideration, and he did it in good season. He did it against the earnest and vehement protest of every friend, so far as I know, who had any idea of what was impending. The field has been absolutely open and free ever since to any candidate who could give a reasonable promise of carrying enough of the doubtful states to secure election. A sound republican who can now convince the party that he could probably get more votes than any other sound republican in the doubtful states—would be sure of the cordial support of those who have heretofore pushed Blaine."

"Is it true, Mr. Reid, that Mr. Blaine's friends in New York have been pushing Blaine in spite of his letter of declination?"

"So far as I know there is nothing in that. I certainly have not been concerned in any combination or organization to push him, nor have I reason to suppose that any of the other gentlemen named in the Philadelphia letter have been. I have waited, and I think all are waiting, to see if anybody else developes such popular strength as would seem to give assurance of carrying the doubtful states. If good ground could be shown for hoping that Sherman could carry New York, I should be delighted, and would give him the heartiest support I know how. The same might be said of Harrison, Gresham or Allison. If Chauncey M. Depew himself, or his most sagacious friends, believed that while carrying certain doubtful states in the East he would not run the greatest risks of losing several important republican states in the West, we would support him with affection and enthusiasm. The Chicago convention, when it meets, will, above all merely personal considerations, try to nominate him."

BUNGLING EQUIVOCATION.

"Then do you think there is a possibility of Blaine's nomination?"

"Yes, a possibility. Blaine has withdrawn his name as a candidate, which was his right. The party is engaged in considering the names of other candidates who are offered under the prevailing volunteer system. If, after full consideration, it fails to find any other candidate about whose strength in the doubtful states it feels an equal degree of confidence, it may finally conclude, as Mr. Lincoln did, at a certain period of the war, that the volunteer business is played out, and that a draft must be ordered. The contingency may never occur, and at present it is certainly distant; but if it should occur, I believe the service of the republican party at this time to be, in the highest sense, the service of the country and see no reason why Blaine, more than any other citizen who has sought and received honors from his party, could or should be exempt from its draft. To refuse under such circumstances would, in fact seem not unlike desertion in the face of the enemy. If the presidency is not an office to be sought, as some say, it is certainly not one to be refused. I do not know any public man in the United States big enough to undertake to refuse the greatest office on earth without making himself ridiculous, or worse."

OPINION AT WASHINGTON.

How Republican Politicians Regard the Blaine Sensation.

WASHINGTON, May 5.—Opinion on the Times special is generally divided. Among republican politicians in Washington there seems to be no doubt of Blaine's receiving the nomination at Chicago, unless he makes, prior to the convention, a positive declaration of his refusal to run in the event of receiving the nomination. The idea of actively working a boom in Blaine's behalf, and with his connivance, is ridiculed by Blaine men in congress, because they know that no effort will be required to nominate Blaine, if he will accept. Sherman is the only candidate against Blaine who will go into the convention with any considerable number of votes pledged to him on the first ballot.

TO THE HIGHLANDS.

The Blaines Will Accompany the Carnegies to Scotland in June.

NEW YORK, May 5.—Mrs. Andrew Carnegie has received a letter from Mrs. James G. Blaine accepting the invitation to join the Carnegies coaching party through the Scottish highlands, about the 6th of June. Mr. Blaine's friends assert it is an evidence of improved health that he can take such a trip.

Yesterday afternoon Mrs. Wells, who lives at Cedar Mills, Washington county, met with a painful accident. Mrs. Wells was driving into Portland, accompanied by her 6-year-old son, when the horses became frightened at a dog and ran away. Both of the occupants of the wagon fell out, and in falling Mrs. Wells struck the front wheel and then fell to the ground, striking her head upon a sharp stone. The woman received a painful scalp wound and sustained bruises on the body. Though severe, her injuries are not regarded dangerous. Fortunately, the boy escaped uninjured. After spilling out the occupants, the team ran on a short distance and ran into the buggy of a Mr. Strube, completely demolishing it.

The "Exposition Universelle de l'art Culinaire" awarded the highest honors to Angostura Bitters as the most efficacious stimulant to excite the appetite and to keep the digestive organs in good order. NOTICE OF FINAL SETTLEMENT—IN THE matter of the estate of Edward Gallagher, deceased: Notice is hereby given that the undersigned, executor of the last will and testament of Edward Gallagher, deceased, has filed his final account in the matter of said estate, and the county court of the state of Oregon for Multnomah county has appointed 10 o'clock A. M. of Tuesday, the 8th day of May, A. D. 1888, at the county court room of said county, as the time and place of hearing objections to said final account, and the settlement thereof and the distribution of said estate. W. J. VAN SCHUYVER, 9a1aw4t Executor.

NOTICE OF RECEIVER'S SALE—NOTICE IS hereby given that pursuant to a decree of the circuit court of the United States for the district of Oregon, entered April 21, 1888, in a cause therein pending wherein Albert G. Bogert et. al. are plaintiffs and Joseph Holladay, executor, substituted for Ben. Holladay, deceased, et al., are defendants, the undersigned, receiver therein, will offer for sale to the highest bidder for cash, in Portland, Multnomah county, Oregon, at the door of the county court house of said county, at 10 o'clock A. M. of Thursday, May 31, 1888, ten thousand, being all the shares of the capital stock of the Oregon Real Estate Company. The stock will be offered for sale in lots of five hundred shares each, and will be sold to the highest bidders respectively, upon this understanding and condition, to-wit: That after the stock has been bid off in lots as aforesaid the stock will be offered for sale in one lot of ten thousand shares, and will be sold to the highest bidder therefor, in case his bid for the stock as a whole exceeds the aggregate amount of the bids for the stock when offered in lots as aforesaid: but if the bid for the stock as a whole does not exceed the aggregate amount of the bids for the stock when offered in lots as aforesaid, then the stock will be declared sold to the respective bidders for the several lots of stock.
Dated Portland, Oregon, April 24, 1888.
G. G. GAMMANS, Receiver.

The property owned by the Oregon Real Estate Company, and which is represented by the stock of said company to be sold as above set forth, consists principally of about fourteen hundred lots, fifty by one hundred feet each, situated in the choicest residence portion of the city of East Portland. That part of the property adjacent to the eastern terminus of the new iron bridge between Portland and East Portland will soon be desirable for business purposes, while the high level land extending for a mile back from the river offers chances for homes that will be eagerly seized upon when the land is offered for sale in lots and blocks. A year ago three of the leading real estate dealers of Portland appraised this property at over a half million of dollars, and since then it has advanced considerably in value. This stock is to be sold to pay off $350,000 claims against the estate of Ben Holladay. 24a35

PORTLAND, MONDAY, MAY 7.

THE "BLAINE-OR-BUST" POLITICIANS.

It is plain that the "Blaine-or-bust" people, in spite of Blaine's repeated statements that he would not again be a candidate for the presidency, are determined to make every possible effort to force his nomination. They are doing this under cover of a pretense that there is a popular demand for Blaine which cannot be resisted, and that Blaine must at last yield to it. All the time, of course, they are doing their almost to create this "popular demand" and get delegates committed to Blaine. Still, they do not yet declare that they are resolved to have Blaine in any event; they are working their scheme with as much diplomacy as possible and on this line are sowing equivocations with various speech; but it is evident they are going to make an effort to stampede the convention to Blaine and then assert that there was a call for his nomination that was positively irresistible. And they expect then to be able to bring him to accept.

This, but thinly disguised, is the purpose as set forth in the statements of B. F. Jones, chairman of the national republican committee, and Whitelaw Reid, editor of the New York Tribune. Jones now says it is not true that Blaine will be on the ocean and out of reach of the telegraph when the Chicago convention is in session. This piece of information may almost be taken as an intimation that Blaine himself would be willing to withdraw his declination. Reid says: "The party is engaged in considering the names of other candidates who are offered under the prevailing volunteer system. If, after full consideration, it fails to find any other candidate about whose strength in the doubtful states it feels an equal degree of confidence, it may finally conclude, as Mr. Lincoln did, at a certain period of the war, that the volunteer business is played out, and that a draft must be ordered. The contingency may never occur, and at present it is certainly distant; but if it should occur, I believe the service of the republican party at this time to be, in the highest sense, the service of the country and see no reason why Blaine, more than any other citizen who has sought and received honors from his party, could or should be exempt from its draft. To refuse under such circumstances would, in fact seem not unlike desertion in the face of the enemy. If the presidency is not an office to be sought, as some say, it is certainly not one to be refused. I do not know any public man in the United States big enough to undertake to refuse the greatest office on earth without making himself ridiculous, or worse. So Chauncey Depew of New York says "Mark you, Mr. Blaine never said he would refuse the nomination; he merely said that his name would not be presented to the convention. If Mr. Blaine is drafted for service, so to speak; if his nomination is unanimous, I have no doubt that he will accept."

Now, if Blaine is to be a candidate, it is certain that this whole business has been wretchedly mismanaged. It certainly was not necessary to put it in a shape that would give his opponents opportunity to characterize his declination as a cheap trick, gotten up to call out a factitious demand for him, and to show the world that the republican party was wholly his own—"his horse, his ox, his ass, his anything." We believe that Mr. Blaine himself intended just what he said when he declared over his own signature, "My name will not be presented;" and this belief is confirmed by his statement to the correspondent of the New York World, in reply to a direct question, that he would not "under any circumstances," stand again as a presidential candidate. "I could not," he said, "go through another contest, even with the certainty of the presidency at the end of it." "These," very truly says the World, commenting on the present disposition of certain president managers to make him a candidate in spite of himself, "These are not the words of a man who is 'playing 'possum' to secure a nomination, without seeming to seek it; nor is it the language of a man who feels himself to be in the robust physical condition that Mr. Blaine's superserviceable friends protest that he is."

Mr. Blaine has formally withdrawn his name; he has declined to be a candidate again, and it does not comport with the dignity of the republican party to run after him with its supplication to reconsider and accept. Nor was there ever any better place and time than here and now to repeat the inquiry:

> When went there by an age since the great flood
> But it was famed for more than for one man?

HEARING FROM HOME.

The trouble of the Cleveland-Carlisle-Mills grand combination troupe about their tariff bill deepens. Democratic members from various states are hearing from their constituents. The result is that an increasing number of democratic members want the bill modified so as to continue protection to special interests of their respective districts. Thus, Tarsney, of Michigan, is a democrat and has heretofore favored the bill. But he has heard from his constituents, and now gives notice of an intention to move for amendments, so as to continue protection to salt and lumber, the special products of his district. A democratic member from Massachusetts desires that the rate of duty on steel blooms shall be increased; the bill reduces it. His desire is stimulated by the fact that some of his constituents are producers of steel blooms. Foran of Ohio, whose district has large manufacturing industries of various kinds, cannot support the bill at all in its present form, and his democratic colleagues of the same state, representing wool-growing districts, all stand with him. Ermentrout of Pennsylvania, also a democrat, at one time was inclined to support the bill, but he, too, has "heard from home," and now says he cannot vote for the bill unless it shall first be amended so as to save the industries of his district. The Louisiana members are still nervous about sugar and rice, fearing that if they vote for the bill as it now stands an irresistible demand will then arise for putting sugar and rice on the free list. Democratic opposition to the bill is believed to be much stronger and more formidable, on the whole, than when the bill was first reported, and its passage in its present form is now regarded by sagacious observers as beyond possibility.

The fact is, no principle at all beyond self-interest and local interest is recognized on this subject. There are large numbers of so-called tariff reformers, but each and every one wishes to save the industries of his own district. In a wider sense men who are free-traders in most things band together to save the special interests of their own section, as most of the Southern members have combined to continue protection to sugar and rice, while denying it to salt, lumber, flax and wool. Careful, however, as the Southern democrats are to look out for the interests of their own section in this matter, they do not fear the political consequences as Northern democrats do; since not a few of the latter find themselves face to face with the alternative either of voting against the bill or of retiring to private life, while the former know that the Southern system of ballot-boxing will return them, no matter what they do.

Thus, the Southern democrat isn't afraid of the political consequences, but the Northern democrat is. Therefore, when the latter's constituents remonstrate he thinks it good policy to take heed. This accounts for the increasing hesitation and dubiety reported among the democrats at Washington.

A New York daily recently reported that a common thief, who had snatched a scarfpin worth a dollar, was "railroaded" through courts in few days and sentenced to five years in the penitentiary, while a saloon-keeper went free who had been arrested eighteen times in two years on charges of beating, assaulting and robbing women." But the latter, it was expressly stated, had "political influence," and boasted that he had "a pull" on the courts which would always shield him. Recently in Philadelphia John T. Stone, who embezzled $37,000 during a period of twelve years received a sentence of but two years' imprisonment.

OFFICE HOLDERS.

"What in the world," remarks the Astorian, "a man in good health and able otherwise to make a living wants of an office is one of the unexplained incidents of our daily life."

Sure enough; what does any intelligent man who is capable of a fixed purpose in life want of a petty political office? Even if he holds the office by life tenure he surely does not want it. A government clerk gets from $1200 to $1800 per year; the chief clerk of one of the departments gets $2500, but only an exceptionally competent man rises to be chief clerk, and comparatively few rise to the $1800 class. This is as high as a clerk can expect to rise in a life service, and to secure this reward he must do work that would easily insure him from $1800 to $2500 a year in private business, with unlimited personal independence in his private life and political action.

The sober, competent, faithful man cannot afford to be a government clerk even of the highest class. If the government position is dependent upon the rise and fall of parties, or the caprice of the head of his bureau, no competent man can afford to be a government clerk, for even under the legend of "Civil-Service Reform; Public Office a Public Trust," more than 90 per cent of the federal office holders have lost their heads since Cleveland was inaugurated, including all who held offices that anybody wanted.

But there are more serious objections than these to becoming a petty office-holder. If you are a petty office holder at Washington you not only lose all social dignity and consideration, but you are subjected to a system of official espionage and quasi military surveillance on the part of your superiors that soon makes a manly man chafe, and turns a timid man into a subservient lackey. Personal independence is extinguished by official pressure, and political independence is instantly resented as a reason for removal if order for its repression is not instantly obeyed. Federal office holders in situations remote from Washington and the great cities are less subject to the galling persecution of brief authority, but even in Oregon every federal office holder feels that he is practically less a free American citizen in speech and action than he was before he took office. He is directly or indirectly made to pay more than his fair share of the campaign expenses of the party, and yet he has less freedom of speech and action than he had when out of office. The higher offices carry with them more social dignity, but they are relatively no better paid, and there is the same restiveness under the manacles and gags of office that canker if they do not absolutely corrupt the soul.

To illustrate what a Dead Sea apple a public office proves even in the hands of a man of superior ability and of unusual success in securing and retaining office for many years, let us glance at the career of General N. P. Banks, who has just ceased to be United States marshal for Massachusetts. Banks in his youth had been a mill hand and an iron worker, but he had a fine voice and considerable talent as an extemporaneous speaker. The workingmen picked him up during the "Know Nothing" excitement and sent him to congress, where he served two terms, being elected speaker in 1857. Then he was governor of Massachusetts three years; then he was major-general of volunteers from May 16th 1861 to August 24th 1865. Then he was sent to congress where he remained until 1873. Then President Hayes made him United States marshal, and he held the office until last month. This is the record of a man who since 1854 has been continually in office. He started out with excellent gifts for success; he was a handsome man, and a very popular orator; his temper was genial; he had no principles that were not self-adjustable to any change of political wind in his party, and he was so complaisant in his public speeches to Cleveland that the great national headsman decapitated him at last more in sorrow than in anger, and it is said would not have cut off his head at all had it not been that Congressman Patrick Collins, the representative of the Irish Cleveland and Sullivan democracy of Boston, insisted upon it. Banks is nearly 72 years old; he retires from office without a dollar; he has won no honors save of the transient sort; he is to-day a clever, genial charming old gentleman, whom everybody likes to hear speak at a club dinner, but he is out of office at last; out of pocket, and will soon be out of mind.

That is the record of a life-long office-seeker and very successful office-winner and office-holder. Measured by his remarkable personal advantages, his very considerable administrative capacity, his talent for public speaking and his superior ability to make and keep friends among all classes of people, Gen. Banks could hardly have failed to achieve success in any legitimate calling he had adopted, but he threw away his flattering business opportunities and followed politics and office-holding as a life career. He succeeded better than the vast majority of his fellows and his so-called success is a miserable failure, for it leaves him a stranded political wreck at 72 years of age, out of pocket, out of luck and too old to do anything but bravely turn his face to the wall and whistle courageously as he waits for death to call him to a land where there are no offices nor office-holders and no "civil service reform."

A demoralizing influence of political office holding is that ten years of it unfits a man contentedly to pursue any other calling. He is like a man who speculates in Wall street for several years, until suddenly there comes a frost, a killing frost, and nips his root. Does the bankrupt speculator leave "the street?" Seldom for any length of time. He either becomes a curbstone broker or a curbstone loafer. So with an old-time office holder; he is never weary of trying to get back into office; and if he cannot do that he becomes a pot-house politician or a government claim agent. One of the saddest sights in Washington is the presence of so many men of considerable talents, who once were congressmen or high officials in the government service and now flit about Washington in the seedy shape of a hungry and not seldom thirsty claim agent or obsequious pointer dog for the lobby.

We have in mind a lawyer who left a good practice to become a member of congress. He served eight years in congress; he was sober, industrious, energetic, incorrupt, and served with fair credit; but when he came home his law practice had dwindled away, so he sold out his little property, went to Washington and became a claim agent. He was an honest man, and, of course, he could not succeed to his satisfaction, so he is back again in New England working hard to regain his practice. His eight years of service in congress were an absolute loss to him that he can never regain; he lost his practice; he gained no additional home reputation by his federal service. These eight years of service bestowed upon his profession would have grounded him firmly in an excellent practice, and secured him against the necessity of ceaseless toil to his declining years.

The popular itch for office holding is as inexplicable as the popular passion to see one's name in print, which is so universal that even the most miserly of men are sometimes weak enough to give a reporter a handful of peanuts, or send the managing editor a big red apple or an unsalable box of strawberries. There is a graphic picture from the N. Y. Press of the condition of the crowd of office holders that have lost their heads in the custom house under the merciless guillotine of Collector Magone:

"Old men are turned out to walk the streets and grieve themselves into charitable graves. They have learned nothing, know nothing beyond the routine of daily duty. Their smartness, energy, ambition are all gone. No business man will give them desk room.

What kind of a career is this for a warm blooded, talented, ambitious youth? A fair salary for a few years; then paralysis, mental and physical. Better let a young man assume the presidency of a peanut stand, better let him rule the roost in a coffee and cake freight car than run to seed in the service of a political machine."

MIGRATORY MOVEMENT.

From France and the south of Europe our country has never received considerable accessions to its population. Of the Italians who do come a large proportion, after a little time, return to their native country. Most of the permanent emigration from Italy appears to be directed to South America, especially to the republic of La Plata. The French have never emigrated in great numbers, and lack of the migratory instinct is one of the causes that made France fall behind England in the matter of colonial development during the period of discovery and exploration throughout the globe. The population of France is now just about stationary; that is, it neither increases nor decreases. For, though the towns and cities increase, the population of the rural districts decreases in just about the same proportion.

Emigration from Spain is very small. From Portugal a few thousand annually depart, mostly for Brazil. But the movement from the countries of Northern Europe is steady and large, presenting a striking contrast to that from the countries of the south. Thus, from 1880 to 1883 nearly 100,000 persons left Norway, and a greater number departed from Sweden. From Germany from 1871-85 there went beyond seas 1,413,000, and of them 1,319,000 went to the United States, and of every 1000 emigrants 935 go to the United States.

Great changes are going on among the population of Great Britain and Ireland. It is shown that in each division of Great Britain there has been an increase of population in every successive census, but in Ireland every enumeration from 1851 has shown a diminution. In 1881 the population of Ireland was estimated at 5,175,000, and now is at 4,853,000, and this decline in the island as a whole arises from a diminution in nearly every part. The births have always exceeded the deaths, but the balance has been more than taken away by emigration. The civic population is not one-fourth of the whole, instead of being two-thirds, as in England. The inhabitants of Ireland not Irish-born are relatively very few, but they have been steadily increasing, while the inhabitants as a whole have been diminishing. There are now three times as many English and Scotch and more than four times as many foreigners in Ireland as there were in 1841.

Among recent deaths is that of Rev. Edward Thring, the most conspicuous English school teacher since the days of Thomas Arnold. In an address, written for and read before the teachers' association of Minnesota, he said: "Like all other high arts, life must have free play or there can be no teaching." "Teachings and examinations are deadly enemies as soon as examinations cramp the liberty necessary for teaching." "A few fragments of knowledge, acquired at a cost of blunted hope, and loss of power, and false ideas of life, and no skill, and no eye for skill, are not worth the cost."

"In a busy democratic century, which will be satisfied with nothing short of universal education—a century, too, which has seen a greater expansion of the facts which make up the sum of human knowledge than all previous ones put together—the educational problem takes new forms, and we cannot rightly deal with it unless we have regard to its actual data."

> All are to be taught.
> And knowledge is infinite.
> And life is short.
> And average brains are weak.
> And few have time to spare.
> And time is short even to them.

"To grapple with this problem, we must first 'smash up the the idolatry of knowledge,' and let the aim of our education be primarily to call out thought and strengthen mind."

The late Dr. Clemence A. Lozier, dean of the New York Medical College and Hospital for Women, who died on the 26th ult., was a woman of high professional skill and learning. She was graduated from the New York Central Medical College at Syracuse in 1853 at the age of 41, and at once began practice as a homeopathic physician and surgeon at New York. A course of medical lectures in her own parlors led to the founding in 1863 of the New York Medical College and Hospital for Women. She gave the institution $25,000, and took the position of clinical professor of diseases of women and children without pay, and thus earned the honor of establishing the first woman's medical college in the state. As late as 1860 there was in existence in Illinois a secret society among physicians which devoted itself to discouraging women from entering the medical profession. In England and France women physicians, after a bitter battle, have fought their way into professional recognition and public respect, but in Germany the road to success as a general practitioner is full of difficulty for a woman.

The government has prosecuted the rector and wardens of the church of the Trinity church, New York, for importing under contract from Great Britain, in violation of national laws, Rev. E. Walpole Warren to preach in that church. There can be no question but that the contract labor law was violated in this case. Its terms are explicit. It is neither equivocal nor vague. It expressly declares it to be unlawful:—

For any person, copartnership or corporation, in any manner whatsoever, to prepay the transportation or in any way assist or encourage the importation or migration of any alien or aliens, any foreigner or foreigners, under contract or agreement, parole or special, express or implied, . . . to perform labor or service of any kind in the United States.

Eastern Oregon may well ask whether it is a good way to get the Columbia river opened to send a man to congress who is a devotee of the administration whose head has stopped all work during a year past on the river by a pocket veto of the river and harbor bill.

A. ROBERTS

The Leading Clothier,

Shows this Spring a beautiful line of Light-Weight Suitings, being a direct importation from the great London House of Dormeuil Freres. There is, of course, nothing equal to a custom made suit when gotten up by first-class workmen; but we have magnificent proofs in our grand line of

Men's and Boys' Suits

For Spring, that careful study and cultivated taste are exercised in the production of Fine Ready-made Clothing. We are justly proud of our line of Clothing, and the man or boy must indeed be hard to please who cannot select a suit from our stock.

Light Overcoats.

You should see our Spring Styles, the new designs in the goods, the whole undertaking brought to perfection now, and ready for this first Spring month!

A florist makes his triumph on one flower! Here are scores of new combinations, the handsomest, choicest, neatest that manufacturers have wrought into warp and woof. The workmanship doesn't tarry a shade behind the material, and prices are lower than ever before.

Furnishing Goods.

We are daily in receipt of the Latest Novelties from the Leading Eastern Manufacturers, and our patrons can rely on always finding in our stock as good a selection as they would see on Broadway.

HATS.

We carry a full line of the Latest Styles from leading manufacturers, such as

J. B. STETSON & CO.
DICKERSON & BROWN,
AND OTHERS.

Straw Hats.

In the styles for this season there are some novelties which are very neat and attractive.

FOR SALE,
The Barlow Farm

Acknowledged to be the Most Conveniently Located and Best Improved Farm in Oregon.

A RARE BARGAIN.

$35 PER ACRE, on Easy Terms.

The BARLOW FARM, containing 1462 acres, 500 of which are in a high state of cultivation, is situated on the main line of the Oregon and California road, at Barlow Station, 31 miles from Portland, in the midst of a densely populated section, enjoying splendid church and school facilities, and in fact all the essential elements of a refined suburban home.

All improvements are in first-class repair, the dwelling alone costing upwards of $6,000 less than three years ago. Two fine mountain streams, large enough in volume for milling purposes, flow through the premises. This is, without exception, the finest farm in Oregon.

Clothiers and Hatters.

The Probabilities
ARE THAT WE SHALL HAVE WARMER WEATHER.

We all expect warm weather, now it's time for it. You expect to find here just such garments as will be the most suitable for the present season of the year, and you will not be disappointed. Our counters are filled with the very finest kind of

TAILOR-MADE SUITS AND OVERCOATS

of all descriptions. No matter what use the garments are to be put, you will be sure to find the most suitable here, and every garment we sell, whether it's a suit, overcoat, or a pair of trousers, is guaranteed to give good wear for the price paid for it, and every garment we sell is further guaranteed by us to be as low or lower in price than the same QUALITY and MAKE of garments can be bought elsewhere. Most men have found out by experience that poorly-made clothing is the dearest in the end to buy. Some men, unfortunately, have yet to find it out. Our well-made, reliable clothing will greatly outwear ordinary ready-made clothing, and for fit, style and general appearance is equal to most expensive garments a tailor can make. We have tailors here to do all alterations that may be necessary for a perfect fit.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS.

BIDS WILL BE RECEIVED BY THE UNDERSIGNED until May 15, 1888, for heating the Northern Pacific General Office Building at Tacoma, W. T. General plans of the building can be seen at my office, or in the office of M. G. Hall, Assistant Supt. N. P. Express Company at Portland, Or., from which contractors will make their own plans and specifications for heating, guaranteeing a temperature of 70 degrees during the coldest weather. Heating to be by steam, hot water, or by combination. All radiators must be placed under the windows, or in such position as not to occupy wall space. The price named will be for apparatus complete in the building, and ready for use. Bids will be accompanied by sketches and specifications illustrating the plan proposed.

LIFE'S BURDEN.

BY "THE COUNTESS."

"Come," said Fame, stretching out a firm, strong hand,
Powerful to rule and to command.
"Come, I will help you up the toilsome way,
Where fail so many climbing day by day!"

The woman, grieving, sadly turned aside.
"Alone! To climb that rugged way!" she cried.
"To leave all those who love me far behind!
Could that be grateful, then, to them, or kind!"

"What matters kindness to those lowly minds,
Untaught, unlearned, coarse as those of hinds?"
Laughing, Fame replied: "Know, when I am kind,
I bid my followers leave all else behind."

The woman stood, with doubtful eyes and wet;
"They may be coarse," she said, "and yet—and yet—
They love me well, and just because they're old,
I could not leave them so for Fame, nor gold."

"Enough!" cried Fame, and coldly turned away;
"But yet, I think, will come another day,
When you will call, and it will be too late;
There comes but once a chance to conquer Fate."

Alone, the woman sighed; "Ah, me! held fast
By simple ties that will not, cannot last!
How can I rise without leaving them behind?
Yet how leave them, unless to Duty blind!"

BLONDE AND BRUNETTE.

N. Y. Sun.

Webster defines a blonde to be "a person of very fair complexion, with light hair and light blue eyes." A brunette, according to the same authority, is "a girl or woman with a brown or dark complexion." The latter definition is hardly exhaustive enough, according to a consensus of authority of beauty in this city. The perfect brunette should have dark hair, dark eyes and dark skin, and no one color should predominate markedly over the other. Perfect types of either the blonde or brunette are extremely rare. The blonde is the product of the temperate or frigid zones, while the brunette is born usually under a burning sky. There are, however, occasional exceptions to this rule. The most perfect specimens of the pure blonde type were those Grecian women of whom old Homer sang—the Xanthos, or yellow-haired blondes. The perception of color in the history of man's experience had been a growth. The color of the Greek hair alluded to no doubt was that rare auburn, which is sombre in the shade, but which glints like burnished gold or copper in the sunlight. But all reliable modern authorities are united in the opinion that there must be more or less of approximate color in the skin, eyes and hair to produce the highest type of blonde or brunette. Mrs. Joseph Ely, who had been called the most beautiful woman in New York city, is a fair example of the ideal blonde. She has perfect skin, pure white; golden hair and sapphire blue eyes.

There is a type of women with light brown hair, green, gray or blue eyes, that are classed as mixed. If the skin is lighter than the hair or eyes would warrant, the woman belongs to the mixed blonde type. If the skin is darker than the hair or eyes, she belongs to the mixed brunette. There are various classifications of blondes. Among these are the blonde cendre, or ash-colored skin. Mrs. Langtry is often alluded to as a blonde cendre, or cinder blonde. Another class is the olive blonde, whose skin is the color of pale olives. Another gradation is the sherry-colored blonde. Mrs. Ella Wheeler Wilcox comes under this rating. The chestnut blonde has a light skin, blue or gray eyes, and chestnut colored hair. This is the class to which Mrs. Frank Leslie belongs, and a very charming combination these colors make. The Irish blonde has dark hair, clear white skin, and gray or dark blue eyes, with black lashes. "The girl I left behind me" answers to this description.

Sometimes dark hazel eyes accompany other blonde requisites, and produce a striking facial effect.

There is still another class of blonde which might with truth be called the Vesuvian blonde. Reference has been made to this lovely creature in these columns before in connection with a curious phyological problem. This rare and radiant maiden whose flamboyant tresses are the ne plus ultra of vividness, has been apostrophized by the late Fitz Hugh Ludlow in the following words that burn:

All thy curls are winding stairs,
Where my passion nobly dares
To mount higher still and higher,
Though that staircase be on fire.

Miller Hagemen, President of the Contemporary Club of Brooklyn, is of the opinion that the color of the hair determines the style of beauty. Said he:

"The finest blood, other things being equal, tends to produce beauty, tends to clear itself in the skin, is subject to less disorder. The same quality which makes a woman of superior birth, also a woman of superior taste and breeding, also confers a superior physique, a more complete and perfect physical womanhood. Cold bleaches hair, heat blackens it. It is on this account that the women of the tropics are for the most part brunettes, while those of the colder climates are, as a rule, blondes, notably the Germans. The red-haired girl is the fiery product of these two extremes. High blood always brings that gloss upon the hair which imparts the ebony gleam to the tresses of the brunette and the light cloud-like beauty to the hair of the blonde.

There is a mixed type of beauty in the South known as the "chatagne." The prevailing color in the combination is hazel, or the color of the chinguapen nut.

The reporter found Mrs. Ella Wheeler Wilcox in a cosey room in an uptown flat. A dainty little woman she proved to be, sitting in a blue plush armchair, with her round chin resting in her white hand. There is none of that fiery, untamed, Mazeppa-like suggestiveness in her personality which some of her poems indicate. On the contrary, she is a fair-skinned, brown-haired, ingenuous-looking little woman. She looks as though she could write a poem about Parnassus or Olympus, and then lay down her pen and go and mix a Xanthus mustard plaster with equal facility. Mrs. Wilcox is known as the sherry or angelica blonde. In the room also was Miss Fannie Edgar Thomas, a literary protege of Mrs. Wilcox. Miss Thomas comes within the class known as Irish blondes. She is dark-haired, dark-eyed and fair skinned. Both these ladies took a deep interest in blondes and brunettes. A running fire of comment was kept up by both the ladies. Miss Thomas said a curious fact about red-haired, brown-eyed blondes was that they freckle very easily, while the blue-eyed blonde was not so apt to become marked with those hateful little yellow patches. The woman with light hair and light eyes was apt to have a bad liver. Consequently she was put down as the dyspeptic blonde.

"There is a style of tropical beauty," said Miss Thomas, "which includes golden hair and creamy skin. An appropriate name for a woman with these characteristics would be the 'Azalea blonde.' A woman who should not be overlooked in this connection is she whose hair has become prematurely gray. She retains all her freshness and beauty of skin, and the brightness of her eye is undimmed. Suppose we call her the gray blonde! A society woman whose eyes and skin are dark and whose hair is very light is very apt to have made the acquaintance of a hair bleacher.

Mr. Thomas Titian Ochiltree told the reporter confidentially that his hair was the color that Titian loved to paint. There were sunset gleams in it. His were the auburn locks such as Nærea or Amaryllis loved to dally with. Lotta, the actress, had just such hair. Once in New Orleans, when Lotta had to leave town before her portrait was completed, Mr. Ochiltree, with the chivalry for which he has always been noted, volunteered to have the sheen of his beautiful Vesuvian-tinted locks transferred to Lotta's canvas; so that the actress's portrait now wears Mr. T. T. Ochiltree's hair. There are strange combinations in this weary world. The ex-congressman is known among his friends as the Vesuvian blonde par excellence.

A most striking and original type of beauty is that possessed by Mr. Robert F. Cutting. His is that delicate shade of color known as the "butter brunette." Behold, thou art fair, Robert. Thou hast doves' eyes within thy locks. Selah!

Mr. Ward McAllister, who once said that only 400 persons constituted the society of New York city, is denominated by Col. Titian Ochiltree as a "pancake 'alf and 'alf." As the pancake is apt to assume a sickly, pallid hue when cold, and as the colonel failed to state whether Mr. McAllister's complexion resembled a hot or cold pancake, a closer definition is awaited by his friends. Kismet!

When called upon by the reporter, Mr. Edward Harrigan wore an artificial complexion. He had various names for those shades of beauty which are not distinct types. He thought that "sarsaparilla blonde" or "terra cotta brunette" would hit somebody. There was a particular brown color about a traveling theatrical company when salaries were due and unpaid, which might be called the "oakum complexion," or the color of a bad orange. In his experience Mr. Harrigan had met with what he called the "freckled blonde." There was a most bewitching green type of beauty known as the "malaria blonde." This complexion was sometimes accompanied by the fever and ague. This was apt to be a shaking combination. Mr. Harrigan had seen a peculiar, greasy complexion in his travels. This type he thought could be found frequently in Brooklyn. He thought "oleomargarine blonde" would be sufficiently explicit a title for this style.

A CHICAGO ART FACTORY.

Forty Paintings an Ordinary Day's Work for One Man.

Chicago Inter-Ocean.

The workmen, or artists, as they preferred to be called, go to work with all the abandon and vigor of a house painter working by the job, not by the day. Everyone of them tosses one or two canvasses on the frame, souses a big house painter's brush in a pail of kerosene to clean it, and starts by putting in the sky. There are four or five pails of sky color already mixed. As the brush he uses is four or five inches wide, it takes from one to three minutes to put in the sky. In doing this he dips his brush perhaps into three or four different pails, and blends the tints together with a vigorous and deft series of strokes, all of which looks much easier than it is. Two or three smart sweeps of the brush, which has been dipped into a slightly darker shade, and the distant mountains are made. He then steps back and looks at his work. Time of the first heat, four minutes and a quarter.

He comes up smiling, making another draft on the sky pails, waves his brush with a horizontal swing, and a placid lake mirrors the misty mountains and summer sky. He steps back again and looks at the work. Time of last heat, forty-five seconds. A ten second wait is followed by another attack on the canvas. For a palette he has a table, on which are a dozen little heaps of paint all mixed ready for use. There are three or four tender greens, and an assortment of browns and yellows, with here and there a pile of pure colors. He stabs another big brush into a mixture of asphaltum and burnt sienna, which makes a warm, rich brown, and wildly smears it over the foreground, running up into the sky in spots. This is the dead color for the foliage and rocks. Then he goes into his corner to look at it again. Time of this heat, twenty-five seconds.

Stepping out he takes a large brush, the bristles of which are spreading apart, each hair standing out alone. One side of this is dipped into dark and the other into light green. A slight touch of this brush makes a limb, or two or three careless stabs create a tree, a brief spell of St. Vitus' dance action with it and a whole forest springs into existence. He plays a sort of brass drum obligato on the canvas, occasionally replenishing his tints from the palette, and the picture has all the foliage it can hold without running over the sides. Time of this heat, three minutes and a quarter. There is yet a broad expanse of brown foreground to be covered. The artist picks up a palette knife, scoops up a little paint here and there, and spreads it in picturesque angles over the lower corners of the painting, like a boy spreading jam on a piece of bread, and, lo, there are rocks enough to start a stone quarry. Time of the rock heat, thirty seconds.

The foliage brush is again brought into requisition, and, on being dipped into two or three tints, a gentle tattoo is played over and around the rocks, and, behold they are moss grown. Time of the moss heat, twenty seconds. But the foliage is standing without support. A smaller brush is picked out and dipped into dark paint. A succession of jerky, upward movements, and the trunks and limbs of the trees appear. A house is put on the banks, a lot of underbrush, a sail boat, a half dozen birds of assorted sizes, are all painted in less time than it takes to tell it. Time of the last heat, three and a half minutes; total time, fifteen and a quarter minutes. The painting is done.

Down stairs in the store and sales room the proprietor resumes his confidences while showing this or that "article" which stands high in popular esteem. "They are not painted on artists' canvas, as you see, but on ordinary sheeting, sized and primed. By getting a large quantity we get the stretchers pretty cheap—I won't say how cheap. Briefly, we can turn out a painting, nicely framed, for $1, though some are worth much more than that. Occasionally we have orders for something fine, and then one of my best men puts in a day and sometimes two days on one painting, but for ordinary work forty a day is about the correct thing. Artists, I find, are not much used here. They haven't dash enough, and want to stand and study effects, which takes too much valuable time. I have given work, though, to many good artists who find it pretty slow waiting for the public to buy, and are hard pushed for ready cash.

The Parson Yelled "Fire!"

Pittsburg Press.

They tell a story on an Alleghany preacher, which, to the best of my knowledge, has not as yet been in print. It occurred on a very warm day last summer, and the congregation was drowsy. The preacher was a long talker, and after his sermon had been spread out over the better part of an hour, the congregation was drowsier. Heads began to drop on the respective chests thereunto appertaining, and long, deep breathing became noticeable in various parts of the church.

Then the preacher began to lower his voice gradually. Step by step he reduced his elocution from a fortissimo tenor to a low, soothing bass, until eventually his voice died out altogether. He looked carefully over the congregation. All was still as death. No one stirred. All were nodding. Then the optics of the indignant servant of the Lord filled with gore.

He leaned over the pulpit—away over—waited an instant in that position, and then suddenly yelled "Fire! fire!" in a voice which sent its reverberations through every nook and corner of the edifice. That brought the congregation to life as though a bomb had burst under them. One old deacon jumped up and yelled:

"Where? Where?"

That's where the gag came in, and the minister shrieked in tones of thunder:

"In hell! In hell, for all you sleepy sinners!"

Only strangers sleep in that church now.

AS EXTINCT AS THE DODO.

Fruitless Endeavor to Find an American Sailor.

Various Reasons Given for the Disappearance of the Old Genuine Patriotic Yankee Tar.

New York Times.

"What has become of the American sailor?" is a question which has frequently been asked of late. An inspection of the crew of the average American vessel, either arriving at or leaving this port, will convince any one that the American sailor does not now exist to any great extent. The American shipping laws require that a vessel sailing under the American flag shall be officered by citizens of America. But all American citizens are not representative Americans. This rule is as self-evident on the quarterdeck of the average American vessel as it is in the aldermanic chamber of the average American municipality. It sometimes happens that the captain of the American vessel gives his orders to his mate in strong German accents; the latter delivers them to the second mate in Norwegian accents, while the latter turns them over to the third mate in words which strongly smack of the Celtic tongue. And yet all four are American citizens, as they can easily prove by the naturalization papers in their respective chests. The crew consists of Germans, Irish, English, Norwegians, Swedes, Dutch and Finns. The steward and the cook are Chinese, while the carpenter is an Austrian. Occasionally an American vessel leaves port under the command of a captain who is American by descent and who has under him a mate of the same description. But the chances are that the other officers are of foreign birth, as well as all the seamen before the mast. If there is among the latter a genuine Yankee he is something of a curiosity.

There was a time, however, when the American sailor was numerous enough to be regarded as an institution. And his character was clearly defined. He was bold, chivalrous and trusty. No matter what happened to him he always managed to make a landing, and right side upward at that. In foreign ports he was always ready to boast of the American flag and to maintain this with his might. If any disturbance occurred the Yankee tar was on the spot, and he never left it until matters had been settled beyond a question. While it lasted he was as ready with his purse as with his right arm. Of course, he had a few faults, but these did not tend to rob him either of his own respect or of that of others. Of all the men who sailed the sea thirty or more years ago, the Yankee tar stood pre-eminent. Written and unwritten records, and in more tongues than the one in which we speak, testify to this fact. Perhaps it was because he was too good to last; but at any rate he has gone. Unfortunately there can be no doubt about that.

Of the men who leave this port on American vessels about two-fifths claim to hail from the United States. Some of the captains and other officers are undoubtedly of American parentage. But of the seamen who claim to be Americans the vast majority are of foreign parentage. On the ship's articles the nationality of each man is given. Such Celtic names as Patrick McGinnis and such Norwegian names as Peter Olsen are frequently marked as American. If the names of these so-called American sailors do not smack of this country their tongues still more clearly define the fact that this land is theirs by adoption only. And many of them who have adopted America have done this in an informal manner, not deeming it necessary either to take out naturalization papers or to file their intentions to do so at some future time. Even in the American navy very few of the seamen are of American parentage, and of these none bear any striking resemblance to the old-time Yankee tar. British men-of-war are manned entirely by British seamen. The same rule is followed by the other European powers. America's neglect to follow this rule is not owing to the fact that she does not wish seamen of her own race, but because she is unable to procure them. British merchant vessels are officered almost entirely by British. There is no law which closes offices of trust on British merchant vessels to Americans. It is possible for the American youth who does not wish to become President of the United States to grow in time into a captain of a Cunarder. Persons who have sailed on Cunarders say that the position of captain of one of these vessels is a truly exalted one. Yet no American youth has yet aspired to fill one of these positions.

It rarely occurs that an American becomes an officer on a British merchant vessel, or of a vessel of any other nationality, with one exception. This exception, which goes a trifle toward rousing the drooping spirits of those patriots who desire to see American vessels manned by Americans, is made by Belgium. The principal Belgian line running to this port is known as the Red Star line. One-half of the captains in its service are Americans, and a number of its other officers are also Americans. Although the captains of British steamers coming to this port are, as a rule, Englishmen, several of them have brought their families to this country. Many subordinate officers of British vessels have placed their families in the vicinity of New York. As a rule, however, they remain strongly English in their sentiments. The steamers of continental nationalities are officered and almost entirely manned by their own people, with the exception referred to. There would be little chance in these services for Americans, although our service is largely indebted to them for the means of manning its vessels.

There was an American steamship line a few years ago. This ran between Philadelphia and Liverpool. The vessels were named after American states, and were officered by genuine Americans, who were as patriotic as they were able. And they occasionally had the pleasure of ordering about genuine American sailors, who unfortunately resemble the old Yankee tars about as much as the inhabitants of Greece of to-day resemble the heroic Greeks of old. The American line, however, did not flourish. Perhaps it was overmanaged. At any rate it declined and fell. Some of its old officers are now in the employ of the Red Star Line. Although this line is British, the two vessels sail under the American flag, and are officered by men who are Americans, if only by adoption. These vessels, however, ship their crews in Liverpool, as it can be done cheaper there than in New York. Under this free trade method few American seamen and firemen are obtained, but probably no larger a proportion would be secured if the shipping were done in New York.

Our coasting steamers employ a few Americans, but the great majority of the orders given on these vessels are thrown out with foreign accents. There are a few old-fashioned, Down-East skippers still in the American merchant service, but they seem to lack the more striking characteristics of the men who commanded the American clippers and packet ships of thirty or more years ago. Probably the worthiest successors of the old-time Yankee sailors are the men who handle the Down-East coasting schooners. These men are largely real Yankees. They would not consent to sail under any other flag than their own, and they sometimes go so far as to express patriotic sentiments.

"I have very rarely been able to find of late a genuine out-and-out American sailor," said an old skipper, who remembers the palmy days of the Yankee tars. "I took a great interest in one of them who sailed with me a few years ago. He went by the name of Bob, and he came from New Haven. His family, I have been told, were fairly well off. His only brother, who had a good position in a mercantile house, objected to Bob's following the sea, on the ground that he might do better on shore. Bob had considerable sense, and if he had tried might have risen to be a captain. But whenever he got ashore he took to liquor, and the result was that before he had reached a condition of sobriety he had shipped before the mast on some outward-bound vessel. Bob was very vain, not only of the fact that he had some ability, but also of his propensity for drink, which stood in the way of his advancement. I never could make out whether he was prouder of his ability or of the fact that he had rendered this of no avail by his drinking. Bob, however, was of the old-fashioned Yankee tar type. He loved the American flag. It was his boast that he had never sailed under any other colors. He could not have been hired to work on the Fourth of July. No sailor in the crew could compare with him in strength, endurance or agility. He was worth double the pay that he received. None of the other sailors, who were all foreigners, by birth at least, would have dared to tackle him in a fight. He had the greatest contempt for all foreign-born sailors who claimed to be Americans. I used to speak of Bob as the 'last of the old Yankee tars.' I would be satisfied to sail any time with a crew of half the usual size, provided that they were all men of the same sort as Bob.

"But somehow American boys don't seem to care to go to sea nowadays. I can remember the time when people of good family would send their sons to sea on merchant vessels. I remember the case of a sailor lad whose father was a general in the United States army and a member of the first class that ever graduated from West Point. This lad was sent before the mast on a merchant vessel. He stuck to the sea, although he never became anything higher than a common seaman. Whenever he was paid off in an American port, it was his custom to go to the house of his father, whose circle of acquaintance was both high and large, and here he would stay while his money lasted. No one seemed to object to his shifting his cud of tobacco from one cheek to the other, or to his hitching up his trousers, both of which acts he performed in as decent a manner as possible. Just imagine the son of a general of the army doing this sort of thing nowadays."

"What has become of the American sailor?" said an old ship broker, who had been in the business for fifty years. "It's my opinion that he has given up the sea and has found a more agreeable and better-paying berth on shore. And I can't say that I blame him for looking at the matter in that light. You notice that a great deal of commerce is going on at present, and that America and Americans are making a great deal out of it in various ways. Our merchant marine is not so small as some people seem to think. To be sure, it is nothing compared with that of Great Britain, but its tonnage is over 2,000,000. It is over 500,000 more than that of either Germany or Norway, and nearly twice as large as that of France. It brings us in considerable money, even if we do lose the freights which go to a vast number of foreign vessels that carry our produce to foreign markets. Still you notice that wherever there is great competition in freights, whereby the latter are reduced to such a figure that they are practically a dead loss, American vessels somehow do not offer their servises to any great extent. It is to those trades free from competition that the American vessels are devoted. What if our vessels are manned by foreigners? No one imagines that the life of a sailor is a pleasant one. The common sailor on an American steamer receives about $25 a month. He has to perform a great deal of hard work for this amount and to expose himself to danger as well. On the American sailing vessel bound for distant points the wages for a seaman are about $18 a month. His work is far more trying than that of the sailor on the steamer, although he receives less pay, but he sells his work by the wholesale and of course gets less for it. His food is very poor, and his life in good weather is miserable. In bad weather it is simply torture. There is no calling on shore, no matter how trying or poorly paid, which is so little to be desired as that of a sailor. No wonder that the American turns his back on the sea and employs himself at shore trades, which pay much better and admit of far more comfort. There are very few Americans, whose parents were born in this country, who are not far better off in nearly every respect than they would be if they now followed the sea. As long as the American can afford to hire any one to perform for him such labors as are dangerous and severe, why should he perform them himself? It may be that our shipping laws are not the wisest in use at the present day, and that their defects have had much to do in reducing our tonnage, but I do not wish to see any law that will render the condition of the native-born American such that he will be obliged to follow the calling of a common sailor."

"I think that the preference of Americans to a life of ease has much to do with the disappearance of our sailor," said an American ship-owner. "It would be better for us if it were otherwise. We need a good navy, and in order to have a good navy we must have patriotic American seamen. And where can we find them under the present system? Our merchant marine will not furnish them, and in the present order of affairs we can hardly expect the right sort of material to be willing to train itself for common service in the navy. Even the harum-scarum American lads who run away from home do not go to sea as a rule, but prefer operations on the plains. The American sailor has disappeared, and until we can find him again we must put up with his foreign and inferior substitutes."

The Mikado in Public.

St. James Gazette

Suddenly the band, which had been playing a lively tune, began a slow and very impressive march. We now fell into two lines, between which the mikado and court slowly advanced. His majesty was dressed in the uniform of his guard, ugly and unbecoming. He wore a very impassive expression, occasionally stopping and nodding his head very slightly in response to the obeisance of his subjects and foreign guests. The empress was dressed in a costume of dark crimson velvet, with close fitting bodice, in which she looked extremely well. She appeared a trifle nervous, but was very gracious, shaking hands occasionally with the wives of the foreign ministers and others. Then came several court officials and some eight or nine ladies of the court, all of them dressed in European style. Most of the ladies appeared to our eyes rather plain. The imperial party sat down in a small marquee for refreshments, and the rest of us fell into the big one. We then looked at the chrysanthemums, which were well worth seeing indeed. The flowers were of great size and beauty, white, yellow, pink, etc. In one tent were three large bushes, bearing respectively 155, 173 and 333 flower buds, all of considerable size, and at about the same stage of maturity. Presently a general uncovering of heads warned us that the imperial party had risen and was departing. We were informed that this was almost the first occasion on which the mikado had thus appeared in public. Truly it is a wonderful change. Only a little while since the Japanese were taught that even to look at him—the glorious rising sun—was to incur blindness.

Moore's Revealed Remedy is not recommended on the strength of its peculiar discovery, but on its own merits. As a curative power it is fast proving to be the marvel of the age.

A BULL FIGHT IN CUBA.

A Lively Description of the Brutal Amusement of Spanish Countries.

Letter in New York Mail and Express.

The door of the toril opens at the signal of the trumpeter. A banderillero flashes his scarlet cloak at the wild bull within his dark pen. For an instant there is heard a threatening roar. Another flash of the hated scarlet and 12,000 are upon their feet breathless. The challenge is accepted with a rush. The man will be killed instantly, you feel, with your heart in your throat. So quickly that your eye can scarcely compass it, the splendid animal has cleared the toril, has had two ribbon-bedecked banderillas plunged into his shoulders by the banderillero, who, quick as thought, has leaped upon the barrera, and sits there smiling while the bands blare and the crowds yell with delight. The bull, raising a great dust, has plunged to the corner of the arena. He sees the sea of human heads and hears the pandemonium about him. He starts back. He springs to this side and to that. He fairly trembles in sympathy with the universal excitement. His nostrils are wide. His head is high up and held regally. Every movement sinks the barbs deeper in his flesh. The blood trickles down his black, glossy sides. He shakes his head wildly and reaches his horns far back as if to pluck out the thorns. He cannot. Everywhere about him is the fluttering hated scarlet. Here, there, everywhere, is an enemy. He starts, his head still up, half forward, half sidewise, toward a group of chulos, there by the barrera, who flaunt their cloaks and taunt him. But over here is another group, and, as if with another thought of vengeance, he bounds that way. Here again he sees the rag. With a swift glare at those he first sought, he breaks in this direction. But no, over there is the point of onslaught. Now he sees. He will exterminate all. Round the barrera wall he sweeps, his gleaming horns like polished lances set in deadly rest. The espadas and matadors smile, leap safely upon the barrera, but regard him closely. Banderilleros scatter to the opposite side. The chulos, like nimble monkeys, leap in every direction and vault the entire wall at a bound. But it is the bull that this time sheds blood. Like matches the forelegs of a picador's horse snap and are broken, the dirk-like horn had laid open the horse's whole flank, and the luckless picador tumbles to the ground in a helpless heap. The bull springs back to finish his deadly work; but the chulos have a dozen scarlet challenges to divert him. On he dashes around the circle, putting everything to flight before him, madly charging a group of banderilleros and chulos in the center of the arena, scattering them in every direction, and, suddenly stopping, whirls about and about defiantly, and as he stands there threatening his enemies on every hand; noble type of brute life, and so grandly scornful of death. A thrill of recognition of his magnificent bravery quivers through the vast audience until it shouts "brava toro!" "brava toro!" "brava toro!" and the bands and trumpets are silenced in the bedlam of human sound.

A DESPERATE BRUTE.

That bull will fight and will kill something or somebody. Every soul there knows it. The excitement increases. He is given no rest. Here a scarlet cloak, there a crimson capa, beyond a red muleta, again and again taunt him. Headlong he goes storming a group of banderilleros and chulos, charging here, there, and like a flash flinging one luckless fellow over both barreras like a rat, to fall bruised and bleeding among the wildly excited people; whirling, and seeming to bound and rebound from all fours instantly, he breaks for a picador sent out to meet him. The picador, with pica at rest, and his fear-stricken animal quaking beneath him, prays to the Virgin and is ready. Receiving the great pike like a wisp, the bull with a terrific lunge sets his horn clear to the head in the doomed horse's breast, and with another bound and savage lunge has completely disemboweled him—horse, picador and bull coming to the ground with a crash in a cloud of dust, the assembled thousands howling in a perfect frenzy of delight. The chulos hasten to the fallen picador, standing him against the barrera like a fallen scarecrow; the two dead horses are piled together; the bands and trumpets and people increase their din; and the bull, wild now with his own havoc, seeks new conquering everywhere within the arena. Every actor there is alert. His life every instant depends on that. But the surging masses now howl with derision at them all. This becomes such a storm that the trumpet orders an attack upon the bull. Now come feats of daring that are marvellous. From the chiqueros glides a banderillo with a gay umbrella in each hand. He moves swiftly across the arena and in a moment is before the bull. To this side, to that side, he springs, as the raging animal pursues. Around and around the arena they go, describing all manner of graceful figures and movements; the one with no defence save in his nerve, alertness and agility; the other impetuous to destroy. If there be grace and wonderful daring in this whole sad business you see it with the banderillero and the bull. The latter is not less terrible in his rage, but he is discomfited. He stops springing and lunging. He is still aggressive but more wary. He watches for a moment when he may suddenly and instantly destroy. But at that moment the banderillero is fairly between his horns, and, with a matchless movement of daring, swiftness and grace, has reached up, over beyond the deadly head, and the next glance of your eye discovers two more blood-letting darts planted firmly in the bull's shoulders, the banderillero at a safe distance, the enraged brute charging madly in every direction, and the onlookers almost uncontrollable in an ecstacy of excitement. This is repeated and repeated, with varying fortunes and perfection, until the bull's black eye is filled, like a target in archery, with torturing darts. A continual increase of frenzy possesses the crowd. "Fuego!" "fuego!" "fuego!" is screamed from 10,000 throats. The trumpet shrilly echoes "Fire!" Now banderillas charged with bombs, which explode with the resonance of a gun, are daringly plunged in the bull's back and shoulders. Madly he charges upon his tormentors as the bombs burst, tearing the flesh away and flooding his panting side with blood. With a tremendous rush he forces his relentless enemies to flight and madly leaps upon the barrera, tumbling down upon his back, driving the dozens of darts and exploding banderillas farther into his quivering flesh, and bounds upward into the air like a ball from the awful agony he endures. For a moment he moans. Then, with a quick writhing of his whole maddened frame, he sweeps around and around the arena with his noble head aloft. In his desperate agony he seems to be looking with human eyes into inhuman eyes for pity, for help.

THE FINAL SPURT.

Suddenly the flash of a red handkerchief in the hands of the president is seen. Like a flash the espada, with a long, keen Toledo blade in his right hand, and in his left a willowy stick over which the red muleta is flung, confronts him. The bull charges the hated cloth. The espada barely moves. Every plunge of the bull is upon the muleta. He does not see the man. His eyes are bloodshot and glaring. His mouth is half open and flecks of foam cover his neck and legs. To this side and to that, like the graceful waving of a banner, the espada carries the bull bodily. This play is marvellous. Suddenly the bull has missed the muleta; is back under it and the espada. The latter vaults the animal at a bound, and in an instant is again master. The mastery is complete now. For a few moments, which seem interminable to the breathless crowd, the play goes on—intellect, skill, daring the king of all brute savagery and force, and in a twinkling the yard-long blade is sent with a "zip!" clear through, the fore shoulder, the heart, and (sometimes) the bull's body. The blood spurts from his nostrils. He recoils. He wavers and staggers. He makes one final plunge, brave in death, toward the smiling and triumphant espada. His horns strike the ground. He is in a heap and vanquished. The puntillero, dressed in black, springs forward and forces a lance in the brain. Three little donkeys come galloping in. The bull is dragged upon the run out the reses muertes gate. The assembled thousands are wild with excitement—and that is all. Six bulls are usually thus dispatched, and it will cost you from $2 to $25 in gold for three hours' contemplation of this form of torture and murder.

EDGAR L. WAKEMAN.

COOKING UTENSILS IN MEXICO

The Simplicity of the Outfit to be Found in Homes of the Poor.

The cooking stove of the Mexicans was a model of cheapness and simplicity, says a letter in the Pittsburg Dispatch. It consisted of an earthern jar or pot, in which was placed charcoal, their universal fuel. Upon this was placed the pot or jar they cooked in, of either iron or earthenware, containing the articles to be cooked. Fresh meat can be kept in its natural state in that climate only for a very short time—salt having no effect upon it. It is therefore cut into strips and dried or "jerked," as we term it, in the sun. Thus prepared it will keep for an indefinite length of time. In its appearance it is similar to our dried beef, but to an American taste is rather insipid, or, to speak more clearly, leathery. The meat in sufficient quantity is placed in the pot, as is also the vegetables desired. To this is added the native chile pepper, the extreme pungency of which, to the uncultivated taste takes away the breath, our best cayenne pepper being as mild as lemonade in comparison. But it seems mild enough to these children of the sun, and they relish it highly.

Each family, and I speak of the poorer classes, have their mill by which is prepared the meal—corn—of which their bread is made, when required, and this is a pattern of that described in Biblical history. It consists of a slab of stone about two feet square, made smooth on the one side and slightly concave from outer edge to center. This is elevated upon stout stone pegs to an angle of about forty-five degrees. A piece of hard, fine-grained stone about the length and size of an ordinary rolling-pin in modern use, thick in the middle and tapering to the end, furnishes the "upper millstone," as it were. The corn to be converted into meal is first soaked in water. The earthen jar containing this is placed alongside of the mill, the female who supplies the motive power rolls up her sleeves, if she is so encumbered, kneels down in front of the slab, and taking a handful of corn out of the jar, throws it with a deft hand across the surface of the slab, and then, with a graceful up and down movement, reduces it with the stone rolling-pin to a paste.

When this is ground fine enough, it is taken between the hands and made into thin cakes known as tortillas, and these are cooked upon a piece of sheet-iron placed upon the fire. This apparatus, we learn, was the same in general respects as that used by the Aztecs. Wheat is raised to some extent, and they have mills for preparing it, but the mill I have described is the mill of the poor.

The goatskin, pitched inside, also described in the bible, we found in frequent use as receptacles of water, milk and the fiery mescal, aquardiente, and that most potent of all Mexican intoxicants, pulque. The filled goatskin is slung over the shoulder with a broad strap, and the end of one of the forelegs tied with a thong is used as a spigot to draw off the contents. It takes one some time to get accustomed to the pitchy taste of the contents of these primitive vessels, yet it was rather a novel experience to take a drink out of one of them.

SCENES IN TANGIER.

The Moorish City Totally Different From All Preconceived Notions.

Corr. Boston Transcript.

The first thing to meet you in Tangier is a stench, the second a flea and the third a bare legged Moor. The flea acts as chairman of the reception committee, and if the stench gets to you first, it is only because the flea and the Moor are afraid of water. The first thing that surprises a man is the tremendous difference between Tangier and Gibraltar, only fifteen or twenty miles away. In Gibraltar you are in Europe, both geographically and as far as your surroundings are concerned; in Tangier you are in Africa, and were you in the heart of Africa, scenes could not be stranger nor sensations more novel.

There is no more use in trying to describe Tangier or any other Moorish city than in attempting to prove to a man that three and three are five; for the process of reasoning in the one would be no stranger than are the sights in the other, different from all preconceived notions. When a Moor writes a letter he commences at the right hand side of the page and writes toward the left. When a Moorish belle goes out for a promenade she modestly covers her face and exposes about all the rest of her person, and that same difference runs through city, houses, people and animals; all is different. And in Morocco you gain more new sensations in an hour than you could hunt up in Europe in ten years of travel; for there is no review nor old ideas in a new dress; all is novel and startling from the first salutation in Arabic to the depth of the first flea-driven well you find on your person after landing.

Tangier is tremendously picturesque from a distance, and abominally filthy near to it, it is also the cleanest and most civilized city in all Morocco. It is situated on a number of steep hills, and has several paved streets, and is the only city in Morocco where it is safe for a white man to claim the right of way when he meets an Arab or his donkey. As has been said, it is the cleanest city in the country, which means that the Europeans living there have secured the passage of an ordinance forbidding the throwing of any dead animals, larger than goats, into the street to rot; you can, however, gather that it is possible to get quite a rich atmosphere out of a good assortment of dogs and goats without appealing to the donkey tribe, and it is impossible to stub your toe anywhere without turning up a fragment of a dog's shin bone, or a section of the backbone of a goat. Talk about the noise and chattering at Naples on landing! Naples is a deaf and dumb asylum compared with the landing place at Tangier. In the first place, it is utterly impossible for a Moor to talk without shouting, or to shout without getting into a row, and the result is that as the Moors are a talkative race, there are always a dozen or so rows going on where two or three are gathered together. On the first step to the small pier I had a row with the boatmen about their pay; on the second three Moors got into a fracas about carrying the luggage; on the third, one hotel runner offered to throw the other into the water for a real; at the top of the pier a Moor and a Jew were hammering each other, with odds on the Moor; at the gate a Sus negro was on the dead run, with his face covered with blood, while at his heel were a pack of shouting, yelling Moors, and the march to the hotel was through a lane of dogs, each trying to make a meal out of the other's windpipe.

[illegible]WS OF THE NORTHWEST

[illegible] Summary of Oregon and Washington Happenings.

[illegible] Coast Notes—Fire at Canby—Siletz [illegible] Quiet—Cascade Locks—The Barbarous Wire Fence.

OREGON.

[illegible] will soon have a new flouring mill.

[illegible] cheese factory has just been started [illegible], Coos county.

[illegible] with his crop full of gold [illegible] from Wasco county.

[illegible] Leader is urging the citizens of [illegible] to build water works.

[illegible] construction of a new steamboat on [illegible] Klamath lake is talked of.

[illegible] has incorporated at Lostine for [illegible] of building a flouring mill.

[illegible] of Huntington, has been [illegible] insane and sent to the asylum.

[illegible] Barker, of Butter creek, Morrow [illegible], was fined $100 for allowing his scabby [illegible] to wander on the range.

[illegible] Lumbering Company's flume is [illegible] miles of the city, and the work is [illegible] pushed as rapidly as possible.

[illegible] new Catholic church to be built at [illegible] will cost $8000 and will seat 600 people. [illegible] J. Roberts is the architect.

[illegible] L. Applegate is stumping the state [illegible] republican party. He speaks at Harrisburg [illegible] Monday, May 14, and at Albany [illegible] May 15.

[illegible] Winberly, a student at the Oregon [illegible] Normal School from Roseburg, is lying [illegible] with symptoms of brain fever, and [illegible] recovery is doubtful.

[illegible] short time ago, in Jordan valley, Al [illegible], an old-time stage driver, struck Dick [illegible] over the head with a spade. It is [illegible] that Hunger will die.

[illegible] talk at Harrisburg of constructing [illegible] ditch for the purpose of furnishing [illegible] power for a paper mill, which Portland [illegible] propose to build there.

[illegible] Brown, the brakeman who was [illegible] with having robbed the body of [illegible] Kilbatack, had his trial at Huntington [illegible] week and was fully exonerated.

[illegible] county's school fund has been quite [illegible] augmented since the commencement [illegible] circuit court. Several large fines [illegible] of smaller ones is the cause thereof. [illegible] decision practically settles the [illegible] that the court house block in Pendleton [illegible] be sold and the new court house [illegible] another block. The case will probably [illegible] appealed.

[illegible] The John F. Miller had a [illegible] rough time the last trip. She encountered [illegible] gale and was thrown on her beam [illegible], and the pumps were kept going night [illegible] for some time.

[illegible] County Star: Uncle Billy Rob[illegible] who was arrested upon a charge of an [illegible] with intent to kill was examined in [illegible] last week and acquitted, the evidence [illegible] showing that he was the assaulted [illegible].

[illegible] store at Canby burned down [illegible] at an estimated loss of $4500, building [illegible]. It is rumored to have been [illegible] of an incendiary, by boring holes [illegible] the wall and pouring coal oil [illegible] to start the fire.

[illegible] D. Hadley, of Burnt river, Baker [illegible], was endeavoring to break a colt, he [illegible] severely kicked by the animal on the [illegible] cheek bone, just below the eye, breaking [illegible] his cheek bone and cutting him just [illegible] the eye and down the right side of the [illegible], making a severe and painful wound.

[illegible] late, agent at the Siletz Indian [illegible], is again in peaceful possession [illegible] at the reservation. A special agent [illegible] him on his return, after being [illegible] off by the Indians, and a peace has [illegible] patched up, and things are again moving [illegible] quietly without danger of any [illegible] disturbance on the part of the Indians.

[illegible] News: S. T. Newsome has erected [illegible] water works in Prineville. He has [illegible] a cistern on the hill north of town capable [illegible] holding 10,000 gallons of water, which [illegible] supplied by means of a wind pump from [illegible] on the Ochoco. The cistern is about [illegible] from the mill and the water is raised [illegible]. From this cistern Mr. Newsome [illegible] to irrigate a garden and orchard [illegible], which is free from frost, and [illegible] grow all classes of tender vegetables. [illegible] spring he put out 2500 strawberry [illegible], which are thriving well and [illegible] considerable fruit this season.

The Barbarous Wire Fence.

[illegible] Jacob Bashor, who lives [illegible] miles east of Salem, built a [illegible] wire fence on his place Saturday [illegible]. He had hardly finished putting [illegible] a mare belonging to him, [illegible] $150, ran against it at full speed. [illegible] down the fence and cut her wind[illegible] and the jugular vein in twain, and [illegible] minutes. Another horse [illegible] badly used up, but will [illegible]. Mr. Bashor says he won't put up [illegible] wire fence on his place.

[illegible] County Court Notes.

[illegible] Hill, charged with deadly assault, [illegible] acquitted.

[illegible], for selling liquor without [illegible] license, was fined $400.

[illegible], Jr., was found guilty of assault [illegible] fined $100 and costs.

[illegible] obtained a divorce from Sarah [illegible] and the custody of their three minor [illegible].

[illegible] Williams for shooting Peter, the [illegible] of the Long Creek Eagle, was [illegible] to the penitentiary for eighteen months, [illegible] brother Charles, who was an abettor in [illegible], was fined $250.

Pendleton Pleasantries.

[illegible]: Mr. H. W. Wheeler called [illegible] office this morning, and began in[illegible] a son of his abuse, when he was [illegible] by Mr. Stillman, the East Oregonian [illegible] bookkeeper, that he was "no gentleman." [illegible] He desired Mr. Stillman to step out [illegible] sidewalk and repeat the statement, [illegible] which request Mr. Stillman promptly [illegible], upon which Mr. Wheeler struck [illegible]. Stillman immediately knocked him [illegible], causing the loss of a tooth and some [illegible], but otherwise doing no serious damage. [illegible] Mr. Wheeler is invited to call again [illegible] he desires, "come he in peace, or [illegible]."

The Cascade Locks.

[illegible]: The "pocket [illegible] of the river and harbor bill by President [illegible] last session has left this improvement [illegible] in a sad predicament. [illegible] about $90,000 remaining on the [illegible] July, and $75,000 of this amount was [illegible] up to the 1st of January. Since [illegible] only a few men have been employed [illegible] than the plant, and no funds [illegible] available until the passage of the [illegible] harbor bill, which may not occur [illegible] close of the session. In little over [illegible] annual freshet will take place, [illegible] will have to be suspended until the [illegible]. It is expected that a liberal [illegible] will be secured this year, and [illegible] will be prosecuted with the greatest [illegible]. This depends upon the contingency [illegible] Cleveland will not again insult the people [illegible] of the country by another veto.

NECROLOGY.

[illegible], an old pioneer of Grant [illegible], died April 27.

[illegible] R. C. Lawrence, of Baker [illegible], died May 4, of peritonitis, aged 20 [illegible], leaving an infant three [illegible] She was a daughter of Coll Van [illegible] of the Yaquina Post.

[illegible] McLeod, wife of John McLeod, [illegible] on Monday the 1st, aged [illegible]. Mrs. McLeod had lived in Coos [illegible] about 12 years and had long been a [illegible] sufferer from bodily ailments.

[illegible] John Campbell, of Empire City, died [illegible] May 1, aged nearly 60 years. Mr. Campbell [illegible] a few months ago. The aged [illegible] well known in Coos county, where [illegible] resided many years and kept the [illegible] hotel of Empire City.

Merchandise received or soon to arrive by rail: 3 cs cigars, 230 bxs tobacco, 40 bxs ink, 57 bdls shovels, 13 ctes anvils, 34 bls waste, 7 cs yarn, 8 cs clocks, 10 pumps, 98 cs boots and shoes, 16 cs rubber do.

PRODUCE RECEIPTS—For the past twenty-four hours include 4445 ctls wheat, 102 bbls flour, 200 ctls oats, 17,490 lbs wool, 7700 lbs hides, 10 pkgs butter, 117 cs eggs, car hay, 2 cars oranges.

EXPORTS—To San Francisco per steamer Oregon: 12,240 ctls wheat, 255 hf sks flour, 1560 ctls bran, 2500 ctls shorts, 411 sks potatoes, 92,490 lbs wool, 5 cs cassimere, 3 cs flannels, 7 bls 3 cs blankets, 12 sks gluestock, 684 hazelhoops, 100,000 lath, 25,000 ft ash lumber, 50,930 ft fir do, 40 tons scrap iron, 218 bdls straw paper, 10 bls pelts, 62 bdls green 5 bdls dry hides, 5 bls deer skins, $2752 treasure.

FREIGHTS—The spot available list is: 2080 tons iron, 1436 wood, and 1288 composite, a total of 4713 tons. The loading list remains 3204 tons. No new business is to be reported.

WHEAT—Advices are of easy markets for the most part. No sales of buyer season made in San Francisco to-day, buyer year selling lower. The local market is wholly without interest.

FLOUR—Only a small parcel out by steamer. Trade is quiet, but prices steady.

MILLSTUFFS—Shipments of 200 tons by steamer. Local trade quiet and values rather firm.

GREEN FRUIT—Three cars oranges received in two days. These are nearly closed out at old prices. A car of lemons will be here early next week.

EGGS—Receipts of local have fallen off some, but there is a full supply. Eastern have sold slowly.

BUTTER—Weak, and there is little local in open market that brings over 25c.

WOOL—Light movement with no business reported. The markets are slow to easy.

The April Grain Movement.

Expressed in short tons, the receipt and export of wheat and of flour reduced to wheat—280 lbs to bbl—for April and for the nine months of the current grain season, compared with the same months of the preceding season, has been:

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

The following special report of the real estate market is furnished THE OREGONIAN by J. Fred Clark & Sons, real estate agents:

The rains of the earlier part of the week were very unfavorable to real estate business, preventing the fulfillment of many appointments where sales probably would have been effected. However, since the rains were of immense value to Oregon, no complaint should be made of diminution of business occasioned by their beneficent descent.

Those who have faith in Oregon now see hope all but converted to realization.

Our own citizens are showing unprecedented enterprise. The tide of immigration is beginning to flow. The efforts being made to induce it cannot fail to immensely increase its volume. The manufactures we desire will naturally follow a large settled population. Without that population to absorb their productions they could not maintain existence. Meantime we can congratulate ourselves on the fact that our manufactures are already numerous, and feel certainty that they will increase in extent and variety as population to sustain them increases. There is another cause for congratulation, viz.: The substantiality of our growth. It has not been developed in a hotbed, it is natural and not forced.

The transactions of the week, corresponding to the past one, as shown in our reports furnished THE OREGONIAN, were, in:

	Deeds.	Amount.
1886	17	$ 48,691 00
1887	33	94,729 00
1888	70	94,362 50

The following table shows for the past week:

DISTRIBUTION OF DEEDS.

	Deeds.	Amount.
Country and suburban	26	$ 26,278 50
City proper and westward	9	9,882 00
Couch and northward	5	12,800 00

SCROFULA

OF THE

[illegible]!

LITHONIA, GA., August 11, 1887.

THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., Atlanta, Ga.:

Gentlemen—I have been afflicted with ulceration of the legs ever since I was a child, the disease undoubtedly being hereditary, as my mother suffered from scrofulous symptoms. As I advanced to manhood my affliction increased until the malady became harrassing and painful beyond the power of words to describe. My right leg particularly became fearfully involved, the left leg being less painfully affected. Finally, about fourteen years ago, the ulcers on my right leg had eaten through the flesh into the bone. In order to save my life the doctors determined to amputate my leg below the knee. The operation was successfully performed by Dr. H. V. M. Miller, of Atlanta, and Dr. W. P. Bond, of Lithonia. But the loss of my leg gave me only temporary relief. The poison was still in my system and soon began to show itself again. In a short time after large ulcers appeared on my left leg, covering it from the knee to the instep. Frequently while at work I could be tracked by the blood which oozed from the huge ulcers, and the sores and rottening holes were so offensive that my fellow-workmen could not stand the stench and would move away from me.

Last winter I was persuaded to try S. S. S. As a last effort I consented to do so, and about seven months ago I began taking the Specific. I soon began to feel the good effects of the medicine, the offensive running began to grow less and less and finally ceased, the ulcers healed, my flesh became firm and solid, and to-day, after using twenty-one bottles, I am as hale and stout a man of my age as there is in Georgia. I am seventy-one years old, but feel now younger and stronger than I did when I was twenty-five. I weigh about 170 pounds. Nothing is to be seen of the terrible disease, or to remind me of the torture I suffered for so many years, except the scars of the perfectly healed ulcers.

I want the world to know of the almost miraculous cure effected on me by S. S. S., and I call upon those who wish to know the particulars directly from me to write, and I will consider it a pleasure as well as a duty to answer their letters. I refer to Dr. W. P. Bond, of Lithonia, as to the truth of my statement. Very gratefully yours,

R. DRAKE.

Wonderful

GERMAN

Invigorator.

THE OLDEST, GREATEST AND BEST REMEDY for the cure of Nervous and Physical Debility, Vital Exhaustion, Seminal Weakness, Loss of Manhood, Failing Memory, and Relaxed and Enfeebled Condition of the Genito-Urinary Organs.

It speedily cures Impotence, Early Decay, Loss of Vigor, SEMINAL WEAKNESS, and all the real effects of youthful follies and abuse, or EXCESSES OF MATURITY.

It permanently prevents all unnatural loss from the system, as thousands can attest who have used the Remedy in the past quarter of a century which it has been before the public.

It is indeed a wonderful remedy—toning the nerves, strengthening the muscles, checking the waste, invigorating the whole system, and restoring the afflicted to HEALTH and HAPPINESS.

The reason so many cannot be cured of Weakness and the above diseases is owing to complication called PROSTATORRHEA with Hyperthesia, which requires special treatment.

DR. LIEBIG'S INVIGORATOR No. 2, with one peculiar special treatment, is the only possible cure for PROSTATORRHEA. By it MANHOOD is restored and the hand of time moved back from age to youth.

Price of either Invigorator, $2. Case of six bottles, $10. Sent to any address covered securely from observation.

Dr. Liebig & Co. treat successfully by Homeopathy every form of SPECIAL, PRIVATE or CHRONIC DISEASES without mercury or nauseous drugs. If vitality is drained from the body, numerous diseases follow that baffle ordinary medical treatment. If allowed to continue, the unnatural loss causes Consumption, Diabetes, Bright's Disease, Insanity, etc. Cures guaranteed. Diseases of the Genito-Urinary organs, kidneys, liver and bladder specially treated. DISEASES OF WOMEN SPEEDILY CURED.

Qualified and Responsible.—Dr. Liebig & Co., from Europe, are regular college educated physicians, and are now in their nineteenth year of special practice.

If pimples appear on the face and body, if you become listless and easily tired and exhausted, look out for the complication with Seminal Weakness, discovered at the LIEBIG DISPENSARY, known as Prostatorrhea. DR. LIEBIG'S INVIGORATOR No. 2 is the only known remedy for the above complication, Prostatorrhea.

Most powerful electric belts free to patrons.

To prove the wonderful power of the Invigorator, a $2 bottle given or sent free.

Consultation free and private.

All Chronic Diseases of Men and Women Successfully Treated.

LOST MANHOOD, Nervous and Physical Debility, Exhausted Vitality, Seminal Weakness, Spermatorrhœa, Impotency, Gonorrhœa, Gleet, Syphilis, Premature Decline, WEAKNESS IN WOMEN, and all Functional Derangements that result from youthful follies or excess in after years.

URINARY Kidney and Bladder Troubles, Weak Back, Gonorrhœa, Gleet, Cystitis, Varicocele, Stricture, etc., promptly and safely cured. No nauseous medicines given, nor strong injections used, which cause stricture. Charges reasonable.

NERVOUS Debility, Loss of Vigor, Seminal Losses, Night Emissions, Despondency, etc., cured.

YOUNG MEN suffering from the effects of youthful follies or indiscretion, should avail themselves of our treatment, the greatest boon ever laid at the altar of suffering humanity. Will guarantee a positive cure in every case.

MIDDLE-AGED MEN There are many troubled with too frequent evacuation of the bladder, accompanied by a smarting or burning sensation; on examination, the urine deposits a sediment, and sometimes albumen is present. The color varies from a bright or reddish to even a milky hue, the patient experiences a weakening of the system in a manner he cannot account for. This is the second stage of seminal weakness. Many die of this difficulty, ignorant of its cause. A perfect cure and healthy restoration guaranteed. Office hours: 10 A. M. to 5 P. M. and 7 to 8 P. M.

N. B.—Persons unable to visit us may be treated at their homes, by correspondence. Medicines and instructions sent by mail or express. Consultation free.

THE MOST ABSOLUTE
ASSURANCE OF INCREASE
ON INVESTMENTS.

As a place for

IN REAL ESTATE

or in manufacturing and other enterprises, Albina presents to-day the most absolute assurance of the largest increase on such investments of any spot in Oregon. It is beautifully situated on the river opposite the north end of Portland, and DOWN the river from the central portion of Portland. The bridges already built, under construction and contemplated, are fast driving the heavy business of the city and nearly all of the shipping further and further down stream. Soon all of it will be carried on below the railway and passenger bridge. Albina will get the benefit of this move, and even now she has the built by the Northern Pacific Terminal Co., in which the O. R. & N. Co., the Union Pacific, the Oregon Short Line and Northern Pacific Companies are interested, are located here. These shops have just been completed, and will soon commence operations with a large force of workmen.

Other industrial enterprises are located here, among which are the Portland Flouring Mills, the largest in Oregon. A dry dock capable of accommodating the largest ship afloat, is now also under construction.

Several companies are now organizing to embark in other industrial and manufacturing enterprises, all of which will be located at Albina, because it is here that

FIRST GAME OF THE SEASON.

The Portlands and Willamettes Play for Mrs. Wm. Garvin's Benefit.

The Willamettes Win by a Score of 11 to 2—Detailed Report of the Game—Description of the New Grounds

The baseball season was opened yesterday by a match game between the Willamettes and a picked nine representing the Portlands at McCoy & Clinton s new grounds in East Portland It was a game for the benefit of the family of Wm Garvin, the well-known baseball player who was crushed to death in Albina a few weeks ago and was witnessed by about 1800 persons The total receipts were $235 65 of which Mrs Garvin will receive $200 after all the expenses are paid

The new grounds are undoubtedly the best on the Pacific coast north of San Francisco They cover about five acres, are very level and are enclosed within a high board fence The entrance is at the southeast corner To the left of it is the covered grand stand 225 feet long and having fourteen tiers of seats capable of comfortably accommodating 2500 persons It is so situated that the audience are completely sheltered from the sun Directly opposite is the players' dressing room, on the roof of which is the stand, for the reporters and scorers The grounds are directly opposite the foot of Lincoln street Portland Owing to the rainy weather, which continued until last Friday, many necessary improvements could not be made, which accounts for the inconveniences which the people were put to yesterday Many not knowing the route wandered up the railroad track about half a mile until they came to a bridge which is being built across the slough and which when completed, will lead to the grounds from Fifth street, East Portland The vacuum was supplied by two small boys who had an old leaky boat which they ferried people across the slough at the rate of five cents per capita or seven for a quarter The youngsters made several dollars this way Mr McCoy says that everything will be in readiness in two weeks

Parrott made good the prediction that he would pitch a good game of ball But three of the opponents hit him safely—Connelly, Noland and Calhoun—and they accomplished nothing to brag about. The Willamettes won hands down so to speak. They had the game won in the fourth inning but the spectators were not aware of this fact at the time They played all over and around the men from Portland The Portlands started with a dash and brilliancy that foreboded an interesting contest For three innings the score stood 1 to 1 Timmons kept the Willamettes down to a single hit and Parrott held the Portlands in a similar position Two fumbles a wild throw and an error by Mebus gave the Willamettes three runs in the fourth inning after which the game began to lose the interest that was centered in it and the crowd in the grand stand gradually thinned out

Buchtel led off in the first inning with a foul fly to Mebus Then W Parrott struck but Mebus missed the third strike and in trying to redeem himself threw wild to Connelly Parrott advanced to second and stole third Kerns fanned out McCarthy batted short, and reached first on Noland's wild throw Parrott scoring. Garson struck out Connelly drove the ball into left field reached Second on Garson's wild throw, third on a passed ball and was allowed to score by Parrott's wild pitch Cook, Jackson and McGuire struck out

G Parrott started the fun in the second inning by hitting short to Timmons and went out at first Tom Parrott lifted the ball and Calhoun after a brisk run caught it but dropped it Parrott stole second and tried to sneak to third, but Mebus got the ball there ahead of him and he was declared out Turnbull made a single but it counted for naught Bailey the next batter, being thrown out at first The Portlands drew a blank in their half, Mebus striking out and Noland and Calhoun going out at first

The third inning was somewhat interesting Buchtel batted a slow one to second and would never have touched first but for Connelly's muff of Nolan's throw W Parrott went out on a fly to Cook Kerns was hit by a pitched ball and the umpire sent him to first. McCarthy sent a grounder to Timmons, who tried in vain to catch Buchtel at third The bases were now full and visions of three runs and a home run flitted through the audience as Garson stepped up to the plate But he fell short of expectations, and instead of knocking the cover off of the ball fanned out However Mebus recaptured the ball in an instant, held it at the plate on Buchtel, and got it to first before Garson touched the bag Loud applause greeted the play but it fell flat in a moment when the umpire announced that the rules of 1888 did not recognize such double plays and declared Buchtel safe McCarthy was caught napping at first, and the inning closed for the Willamettes For the Portlands Neale and Connelly struck out and Timmons sent a fly to Bailey

G Parrott was given first on called balls in the fourth and Mebus s error advanced him to second Tom Parrott s single hurried him to third and both scored on Neale's wild throw Turnbull shared the first batter s luck and went to first on balls Bailey sent a nail driver to Neale who threw Turnbull out at second Mebus s fumble brought Bailey home Buchtel flew out to Jackson W Parrott struck out but Mebus missed the third strike Parrott made third where he was left Kerns striking out Cook and Jackson of the Portlands struck out McGuire made first on the fumble of his hit by Buchtel and W Parrott but was caught neatly while trying to steal second

In the fifth Calhoun made a neat pick up of McCarthy s grounder but made a horrible throw to first Connelly made a worse throw in trying to catch McCarthy at third and the result was another run for the Willamettes. Garson was thrown out at first and G. Parrott struck out Tom Parrott made a clean hit went to second on a passed ball third on a wild pitch and scored on Connolly's fumble of Turnbull's hit. Bailey raised a pretty fly which Jackson got leaving Turnbull on first. The inning was another goo e egg for the Portlands. Mebus and Noland went out at first. Calhoun made another good hit got to second on Kerns's fumbe but no further Neale striking out

Fumbles by Timmons, Calhoun and Noland and two passed balls allowed Buchtel and W Parrot to score in the sixth Kerns was given first on called balls, where he was caught napping by Timmons. McCarthy made a safe hit, reached second by Noland s failure to hold the ball from Mebus and scored on careless playing Garson flew out to Neale Mebus did not hold G Parrott s last strike Parrott made second on Mebus s wild throw, and was caught at third by a throw from McGuire The Portlands did not get a smell of a run in their half of the inning

In the seventh Tom Parrott hit short to Timmons and was caught at first. Turnbull sent a rattling single to left Bailey lined the ball down to second base and Noland picked it up and sent it to Connolly who dropped it Buchtel batted a sharp grounder which Calhoun gathered in and threw Turnbull out at second making him for the second time during the game the victim of a sacrifice hit W Parrott s safe hit a passed ball and a wild throw permitted Bailey and Buchtel to score Kerns struck out With two men out Noland made a safe hit and made the round of the bases on Turnbull's high throw Calhoun struck out

The eighth and ninth innings were short and uneventful Following is

PROFITABLE FISHING

The Dip Net Men at the Cascades and Dalles Make a Killing on Bluebacks

For some days past there has been a most extraordinary run of blueback salmon at both the Cascades and the Dalles and tons of these handsome fish averaging about five pounds each have been taken in dip nets at these two places Three years ago the bluebacks used to be sent here from the Cascades for six bits a dozen and the men who risked their lives fishing for them from stagings and platforms rigged in perilous places along the sides of the foaming torrent, where a misstep meant certain death received but slight compensation for their dangerous labor Things are different now as bluebacks are worth 4¼ cents here spot cash and 5 cents delivered at Astoria A day or two since one man made $64 catching bluebacks, and another made $50 A number of Indians who fish on the Washington territory side of the river have been making $20 a day on an average for several days The fishing places used by these dip nets men are on government ground near the locks The fish caught at the Dalles are used in a cannery there and all hands have been kept busy of late, till within the past day or two the only wheels running at the Cascades were those mounted on scows but the late rise in the river has started several of the other wheels, and if warm weather continues they will all be going shortly, and then the bluebacks and also the Chinooks will need to keep a bright look out to pass the rapids in safety From the large number of bluebacks caught it is to be supposed that a great many have passed up and unless some foul work is done away above enough of them will reach their spawning grounds in Waliowa lake to furnish seed fish ' for the settlers there and to keep up the supply

Discharged Chinese Assail a Countryman Thought to Have Secured their Dismissal

The O R & N Company have had about 200 Chinese employed for some time past in their line near the Cascades locks A few days since two gangs in all some seventy were discharged on account of the work being nearly completed The men had been furnished the company by Twin Wo & Company contractors and the gangs discharged for some reason attributed their dismissal to Twin Wo s bookman Ah Hy who was in the city at the time When he went up to the work the next day some twenty of the discharged men attacked him beat him with iron bars and after he was knocked down kicked him almost to a jelly Ah Hy was brought down to this city on a train Saturday morning and swore out warrants in Justice Bushwiler's court for the arrest of five of the ringleaders in the attack upon him who had been particularly active and energetic in beating and kicking him He then retired to his little bed where he still remains in a condition which may be truthfully described as all broke up

Officers were sent up with the warrants Saturday and returned yesterday with four of the assailants They will have an examination before Justice Bushwiler The men discharged have returned to this city also two gangs who were discharged Saturday They will soon find employment in some of the canneries along the Columbia

FUTURE OF PORTLAND.

What an Old Resident Saw in a Tour of the City and Vicinity

Rapid Development of the Suburbs—The Country Being Dotted with Comfortable Little Homes—Just Beginning to Grow

An old resident of Portland who takes a great deal of interest in the growth and prosperity of the city spent the whole of last week in cruising around the suburbs reviewing all the different additions for the purpose of forming a correct idea of the chances for the future growth of the city He says ' I first went to Albina and explored all the different additions to that flourishing city as far as the Love place on Columbia slough and then came back through different avenues and roads to Holladay addition I found a beautiful tract of country level and sufficiently elevated to furnish fine building sites There has not been so much improvement in that quarter as in some other places but the building of the Portland and Vancouver railway will cause the rapid development of this section and will greatly increase the value of property and improvements of all kinds will rapidly follow

I next went east of the Holladay addition on the Sandy road, following it out to opposite Mount Tabor There I found any quantity of nice little cultivated homes some not so sightly but all really desirable homes having an appearance of thrift and success in making a good living off a small tract of land This state of affairs prevails for three miles south from the Sandy road to the section line road and even to Milwaukie the country is dotted all over with nice little homes it is astonishing to see the number of nice homes, large and small

Sellwood which used to be thought far away is only the beginning of the desirable country along the river I spent three days in traveling back and forth over this section

I went on Mt Tabor which for scenery is perfectly splendid It is a place for homes for the rich

In traveling around I found many located on ten acre tracts who said they were making comfortable livings raising berries and small fruits etc finding their market in Portland but looking forward to shipping East They are getting out of the old Oregon slipshod style and are cultivating their ground well This shows the effects of dividing the land up into small tracts

The only drawback to this section is the large amount of land owned by a well known capitalist of this city which although he is cultivating it like a garden is a detriment to its growth as it prevents the ground from being settled up by families He has 1200 or 1400 acres within these limits every five acres of which would support a family As a philanthropist he would be doing a great deal of good by cutting his land into small tracts and allowing it to be settled

Then I crossed the ferry at Milwaukie and visited Palatine hill owned I understand by a company—a very nice sightly place but not so good as the other side for people who want to make a living off a small tract of land From there I went over on the Taylor s ferry road where are some nice little homes, and thereon to the southwest Portland tract where there is some good land for cultivating and some sightly residence property and all along down to Portland Heights there are many fine locations for residences

West of the ridge back of Portland are many nice places for small gardens plenty of water etc I spent three days in looking over this section

Then I went out on the Cornell road down to Springville finding many beautiful sightly spots all along

The general public has no idea of the vast improvements being made in the suburbs of Portland No man who will take the same trip I have taken will ever question in his mind what the future of Portland will be It is destined in a few years before we are hardly aware of it to be a city of 100 000 to 150 000 people We are only just beginning to grow The seed has been sown and the harvest is coming very fast '

It is only necessary to add that the gentleman furnishing the above has not a dollar invested in property outside of the city and so is unbiased in his opinions of different localities

THE FESTIVE HOUSE FLY.

A Few Seasonable Remarks on This Familiar Household Pest

The season has now arrived when screen doors and fly screens on the windows are in order to shut out that unwelcome pest the house fly And the oft repeated questions will be heard what were flies created for and what good are they anyway? Of course everyone will admit in a general way, that nothing was created without some purpose but very few are able to see what purpose house flies were created for except to try the patience of all mankind and womankind and to make nuisances of themselves generally

It may be some consolation to the annoyed to be told that this particular office appears to be the consumption of those dead and minute animals whose decaying myriads would otherwise poison the air It was a remark of Linnæus that three flies would consume a dead horse sooner than a lion could He doubtless included the families of the three flies

The following information in regard to these families will however cause a feeling of alarm and will create a boom in the screen market A single fly will sometimes produce 20 000 larvæ, each of which in a few days may be the parent of another 20 000, and thus the descendants of three flies would soon devour an animal much larger than a horse

A celebrated naturalist has made the following computation One fly on the 20th of March is represented by 300 on the 24th of April by 300 times 300, equalling 90 000, on the 28th of May by 27 000 000 on the 2d of July, and by 3,100 000 000 on the 8th of August '

WASHINGTON COUNTY DEMOCRATS

The democrats of Washington county met at the court house in Hillsboro May 4 and put out the following ticket which is as good as any that could be selected in fact a ticket that will be hard to beat as every man is a good man and a representative one of his county

Senator S B Houston, representatives Dr D W Ward Ed Schulmerick, Ira E Purdin, clerk T S Weathered; recorder, Lincoln Geiger sheriff N B Mead treasurer Kenyon Crandall commissioners Phil Beal A Norman assessor August River mm superintendent schools J J Johnson, coroner Dr J M Robison

It is more than likely that if the republicans of this county undertake to and carry out the ironclad policy of ringism and proscription of every man that does not bow his neck to the yoke they may lack votes at the election

The republicans of Washington county have been defeated by rebellious voters heretofore and from a clear working majority of 300 have dwindled down to 175 therefore it is best to avoid the shoals and quicksands of former years X

LOCAL NOTES

The house of Michael Tieney No 340 Columbia street was entered Saturday night by burglars who carried off a silver watch and $120 or $130 in coin

A large rose bush in Mr J L Atkinson s garden is literally covered with yellow roses A few days like yesterday will bring out roses of all kinds in myriads

E P Taylor and Henry Blethen are behind the bars in the city jail They are charged with stealing two photographing cameras from Bert Towne

John P Howe manager of the New Park theater, has gone to Spokane Falls with the Juvenile Opera Company The company is doing a very good business

The annual meeting of the Portland Women's Union will be held in the vestry of the First Presbyterian church at 2 30 this afternoon A full attendance is desired

Numerous sail boats were out on the river yesterday and also a small fleet of canoes One of these frail craft upset giving its occupant, an embryo sawbones' a thorough wetting

Sheriff J T Henshaw, of Baker county arrived here yesterday, having in charge two sheepherders named Cooper and Anderson who had been adjudged insane They were taken to the asylum last evening

The bottom chords of the drawspan of the railroad bridge are all laid and fastened The iron for the corrugated floor will be set in place and then the traveling erector will be put up and it will not take long to complete the span

Messrs W W Danel and D Cushman who left here a few days since for San Francisco on bicycles arrived safely at Salem after a rather rough trip owing to the muddy condition of the roads They concluded to stay there till more auspicious weather and are probably by this time on their way

The members of No 2 fire engine Co made a neat present yesterday to Wm Wascher for seventeen years engineer of the company They gave him a beautiful album The presentation speech was made by R T Chamberlin foreman of the company Mr Wascher returned his heartfelt thanks for the kind gift

The remains of the late John Dunn were laid to rest in Riverview cemetery yesterday The high respect in which he was held was evinced by the large attendance at the funeral their being in addition to Volunteer Firemen s Association and lodges of the A O U W Odd Fellows and Knights of Pythias of which he was a member, over 80 carriages in the procession

Bewildered Swallows —As going to show how migratory birds return to the places where they were raised to nest and rear their young the fact may be mentioned that large numbers of swallows can be seen circling around the site of the old commissary of the O R & N Co at the foot of H street The old building was a favorite haunt for swallows which have for many years nested under its eaves This spring the building was torn down just as the swallows began to return and instead of at once seeking other quarters the birds who made that their home have staid flitting around the place apparently much worried and distressed It may be that seeing the bricks piled up on the ground they still have hopes that the building will be rebuilt They will doubtless soon seek some other building to which to attach their mud built nests and let us hope that they may not choose one where they will be considered a nuisance and where they will be treated as intruders and be fought with long poles and their nests washed down with a stream from the hose

House Robbed —The residence of Chas I Sliter at No 80 Sixth street, was entered by some sneak thief Saturday afternoon and about $10 worth of nickels belonging to Mr Sliter s little girl the total deposit in her savings bank and a number of old coins to the value of $20 stolen An entrance was effected by placing a box against the house and crawling in at a back window If there is any variety of thief more contemptible than another and more fitly described as a sneak thief it is the one who steals children s savings banks He is entitled to rank with Noah Claypole and is a cowardly sneak compared to whom a highwayman is a brave and honorable gentleman

Will Be Built —Some doubting individuals have expressed fears in regard to the buildings of the Industrial Fair Association being completed in time for the fair this fall The Oregonian is assured that they will be completed without fail The ground has been surveyed and stakes set and the plans are as far advanced as is possible before the meeting of the association on the 10th inst As soon as an organization has been effected bids will be called for and work will be commenced as soon as the contract can be let There is to be no foolishness about this matter

Snow Melting —Summer is here and its effects are already visible on the snow peaks visible from this city The rocky ridges around the base of Mt Hood are showing black where the snow has melted from them and in various places up the slopes of the mountain crags and rocky points have been denuded of their wintry covering St Helens is still white except a small spot near the summit but a few weeks of such weather as yesterday will materially change the aspect of this mountain

United States Circuit Court —Judge Deady will deliver an opinion in this court this morning in the case of the Oregon & Washington Mortgage and Savings Bank vs the American Mortgage Company on a demurrer to the complaint

There is a person canvassing Eastern Oregon as quack doctor representing himself under the name of Morris Russ claiming to be a cousin of mine and bilking my friends Beware of him He is in no way related to me MORRIS MARCUSE

The best family remedy is undoubtedly Pfunder s Oregon Blood Purifier Relieves when others fail. Safe for infants.

Pullman reservations made for all points East via the Northern Pacific Railroad. Office, No 2, Washington street.

A MIGHTY CLOSE CALL

Thrown Under a Train—A Young Man's Narrow Escape from a Fearful Death

Salem Journal May 5

The people standing on the platform at the depot awaiting the arrival of the Portland train this morning witnessed what was very near a fearful tragedy Harvey Henline son of the ferryman at Stayton was waiting to go to his home at Stayton He carried a flour sack filled with clothing on his shoulder The freight train from Portland had passed through switching and was heading into the penitentiary switch, and Henline who is about 18 years of age attempted to get on to the front platform of the caboose as it passed He caught hold of the platform railing all right but the sack of clothing swinging around, caused him to lose his balance and he was thrown between the caboose and the next car in front

He must have struck a rod or something for he bounded back and lay lengthwise between the platform and the car Four wheels of the caboose grazed his back literally wearing his clothing out C H Monroe jumped to his assistance and after the caboose had passed helped the boy up on the platform. He was then straightened up, and on being asked if he was hurt answered in the negative He was very pale though, and when he got on to the passenger train a little while afterward complained that he was very sick He started for home and will likely recover He will probably know more about a moving train hereafter His escape from instant death was very narrow and those who witnessed the scene expected never to see him come out alive

A DISTINGUISHED VISITOR

BY NELS W DURHAM

Tis not of warrior chief I tell although my hero s clad
In coat of mail as bright as that which Cœur de Lion had
And if that brave Plantagenet had shown but half his vim
The sword of wily Saracen had never daunted him

The learned judge sweeps into court we think he makes a stir
But bless you half the folks in town don t know he wears the fur
And Tom and Dick and Harry the schoolboys on the street
Don t know rich Banker Golden if by any chance they meet

But when the object of my song comes quietly to town
I promise you that all the boys will have it jotted down
And all the men will know it, and all the women, too
And even the local paper will have a line or two

Where sits Astoria by the sea, where Portland greets the wave
Where gaily floats on inland stream the dug-out of the brave
The same reception s given the same attentive care
The noble Chinook salmon is welcomed everywhere

WATER AND SNOW.

Every Indication There Will be No High Water This Season

Warm weather beyond the [illegible] tains which preceded the present showery turn has had the effect of [illegible] ing a very noticeable effect in the water in the Columbia and Snake [illegible] several weeks past the volume of those large streams and also in the tributaries has been slowly augmenting present the water in the lower Columbia ten feet above the zero mark, and [illegible] pretty strong current setting [illegible] water has naturally resulted in the [illegible] ette and the [illegible] here has nearly the ten foot m[illegible] o the gauge. [illegible] lower rivers there is no difficulty at stage of water for heavily [illegible] the deepest draught and [illegible] have occasion to complain at the [illegible] of Uncle Sam in improving the [illegible] our great highway to the ocean. [illegible] four feet of water can be found at the stage of the tide on St Helen's bar, [illegible] depth with a constantly [illegible] quite a sufficient argument [illegible] voice of the most captious [illegible] the difficulties of reaching [illegible]

The influence of the elevated temperature along the [illegible] ranges traversing the eastern [illegible] Oregon and Washington Territory still further removed [illegible] commenced the annual task of [illegible] vast masses of snow and ice. Along mountains so many water courses [illegible] their cradles that these [illegible] rugged regions are drained [illegible] great watery stores [illegible] our annual June freshet. [illegible] thawing process has commenced [illegible] tion may be reasonably expected [illegible] vast over supply finds its home in the [illegible] cific And the [illegible] tion of the eccentricities of the [illegible] with reference to the quantities of [illegible] which fall during the winter season [illegible]

From various indications it [illegible] than probable that there will be no high water this year One thing [illegible] reports are to be relied upon, [illegible] been a heavy fall of snow in the [illegible] On the contrary the total [illegible] usually light when all the [illegible] considered Last winter [illegible] unprecented rigor for this country [illegible] cury it will be vividly remembered glacial shudder went wandering [illegible] toward the lower levels. [illegible] weather it would seem [illegible] condition for deep snow but [illegible] go for anything the somewhat [illegible] state of affairs exists No such [illegible] prevail if this is fortunately the [illegible] have been recorded in past years. "[illegible] we shall have no high water [illegible] remarked an old pioneer pilot and [illegible] boat man yesterday to a reporter "[illegible] he added, if the reports we have [illegible] of the Cascades are correct."
